Nixon declares innocence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Wednesday emphatically declared his innocence in the Watergate scandal, and urged the public to demand that the Senate end its Watergate hearings and their "obsession with the past."

After a three-month silence on Watergate, the President came out swinging against his Senate critics and damaging testimony by his ousted White House counsel, John W. Dean III. But he declined to rebut specific allegations against him or comment on the credibility of witnesses, saying "that is for the committee and the courts."

"After 12 weeks and 2 million words of televised testimony, we have reached a point at which a continued, backwardlooking obsession with Watergate is causing this nation to neglect matters of far greater importance to all of the American people," he said, referring to inflation, the sagging dollar and foreign policy.

"The time has come to turn Watergate over to the courts, where the questions of guilt or innocence belong," Nixon said in a televised mid-evening speech to the nation.

"I ask for your help to ensure that those who would exploit Watergate in order to keep us from doing what we were elected to do will not succeed."

In the lengthy address from his White House Oval Office, and in an accompanying 2,800 - word statement prepared by his lawyers, the President asserted "the simple truth" of his innocence in the Watergate break-in June 17, 1972, or its subsequent coverup.

"I had no prior knowledge of the Watergate operation; I neither took part in nor knew about any of the subsequent coverup activities; I neither authorized nor encouraged subordinates to engage in illegal or improper campaign tactics," he said.

"That was and is the simple truth."

It was perhaps the most important speech in Nixon's tempestuous, 27-year political career, and it followed publication of public opinion polls showing his popularity had sunk to record depths.

The President sought to portray himself as trying throughout his greatest political crisis to discover the facts behind the scandal and to make them known to law enforcement authorities and the public.

But at the same time, he said he was determined to keep the tapes of his recorded Watergate conversations secret to protect the confidentiality essential to the conduct of presidential business.

"Far from trying to hide the facts, my effort throughout has been to discover the facts —and to lay those facts before the appropriate law enforcement authorities so that justice could be done and the guilty dealt with," he said.

Nixon charged that in recent weeks, "it has become clear that both the (Senate) hearings themselves and some of the commentaries on them have become increasingly absorbed in an effort to implicate the President personally in the illegal activities that took place."

He said it was his "constitutional responsibility to defend the integrity of this great office against false charges." But at the same time, he said he accepted "full responsibility" for abuses he acknowledged had occurred during his administration and re-election effort.

Nixon specifically rejected Dean's assertion in a week of testimony in late June that he believed the President might have known about the coverup as early as Sept. 15, 1972, and testimony of others suggesting that Nixon ignored repeated warnings of high-level involvement.

Said Nixon: "We must recognize that one excess begets another, and that the extremes of violence and discord in the 1960s contributed to the extremes of Watergate."

While pledging to work for "a new level of political decency and integrity in America" as a result of Watergate, the President reaffirmed the details of his last previous Watergate statement.

W'gate speech highlights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon's Watergate speech at-a-glance:

Responsibility — "Because the abuses occurred under my Administration and in the campaign for my re-election, I accept full responsibility for them. I regret that these events took place."

Involvement — "I had no prior knowledge of the Watergate operation; I neither took part in nor knew about any of the subsequent cover-up activities."

The break-in investigation — "... I continued to get the same answer: that there was no indication that any persons were involved other than the seven who were known to have planned and carried out the operation."

Senate inquiry — "It has become clear that both the hearings and some of the media commentaries on them have become increasingly absorbed in an effort to implicate the President personally in the illegal activities that took place."

His motives — "Far from trying to hide the facts, my effort throughout has been to discover the facts..."

White House tapes — "I shall continue to oppose efforts which would set a precedent that would cripple all future presidents by inhibiting conversations between them and those they look to for advice."

Looking ahead — "The time has come to turn Watergate over to the courts, where the questions of guilt or innocence belong. The time has come for the rest of us to get on with the urgent business of our Nation.

Pledge — "I will do all that I can to ensure that one of the results of Watergate is a new level of political decency and integrity in America ..."

Political leaders' reaction mixed over Nixon's speech

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington officialdom divided along party lines in assessing President Nixon's Watergate speech Wednesday evening, with Republicans mostly claiming it helped clear the air and Democrats contending it offered no new information about Nixon's role in the scandal.

Sen. Howard Baker, Tenn., ranking Republican on the Senate Watergate investigating committee which drew heavy Nixon criticism, cautiously commented that any information Nixon could offer was welcome and would be used to help the panel write a "meaningful report."

But Democratic committee member Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, N.M., said Nixon failed to inform the public about essential facts regarding his role and was wrong in trying to get the hearings ended.

"Watergate is symbolic of the threats to our electoral process, to our freedoms and is a cancer that has set in," Montoya said. "We must find out what caused it and come out of the hearings with remedial legislation."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said, "In my opinion, the President did not add anything to his other speeches that would tend to divert suspicion from him." He added that the crux of Nixon's speech was his appeal to Americans to focus on potentially dangerous situations other than Watergate.

"I stand behind him in his appeal for Americans to recognize existing and obvious dangers to our Republic, to our economy and the good of the nation and the world," Goldwater said.

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, said, "I regret to say I am not impressed. I find it difficult to understand how a President could be so totally ignorant of the events involving the high officials in his administration whom he himself appointed."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., praised the President for a "forthright stance." He agreed with Nixon that the Watergate investigation should now be shifted to the courts.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said, "I welcome the President's call to meet the needs of the nation but one of those needs is to find out who was involved in Watergate and the misdeeds of the 1972 campaign to re-elect the President."

Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz said, "the President has put the Watergate events into perspective and called upon us to right the wrongs done, to rededicate ourselves to the exercise of public trust in a legitimate and proper manner and to get on with the essential business of government."

Sen. George Aiken, Vt., dean of Senate Republicans, said the speech "will be a big help to the chief executive," but there will still be some "who don't believe the President."

Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., called the speech disappointing. "The President did not (come forth) with any specific answer to these serious charges. We wanted facts. He gave us rhetoric . . . the President did not tell the American people what he knows and what they should know about Watergate."

Defense lawyers named for Monroe murder case

By GARY GROSSMAN
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — The court appointed a team of lawyers Wednesday to defend Linda Joyce Dixon, 22, a former Analomink resident accused of murdering her two-year-old son, Christopher.

The child's decomposed corpse was found July 24 in a plastic bag about 80 yards from an abandoned house in the Hill Troop section of Analomink. Lab tests on the body led to a coroner's ruling of death by homocide and police arrested Mrs. Dixon on a murder charge Tuesday.

Judge James R. Marsh Wednesday named Stroudsburg attorneys John Hiscott and George Royle as defense counsel in the case.

Hiscott became a public defender eight months ago and is now the senior member of the four-man staff. He has an independent practice and has never participated in a murder trial.

Royle, a partner in the firm of Cohen and Royle, defended Ronald Butler in a 1971 Monroe County murder trial.

Mrs. Dixon, a small-framed woman with long dark hair wearing a powder blue sweater to the midrif and dark slacks, was escorted to the courtroom around 1:30 p.m. by a jail matron.

District Attorney James F. Marsh gave the Commonwealth's charge and asked the court to appoint counsel.

"Mrs. Dixon, you are aware you have been charged with a very serious crime?" Judge Marsh asked.

Standing with her hands resting on the defense table in front of her, Mrs. Dixon answered "yes" in a barely audible nervous voice.

Because the defendant is indigent, Marsh appointed counsel from the public defender's office and then named Royle "additional counsel because of the gravity of the case."

Mrs. Dixon's solemn expression never changed as she was handcuffed again and taken from the courtroom by a jail matron and female deputy sheriff.

Sheriff's deputies stopped in the ground floor hall of the courthouse and tried to wave-off a news photographer waiting outside to take Mrs. Dixon's picture.

Unable to discourage the newsman, the defense attorneys and four members of the sheriff's staff finally huddled around the defendant, shielding her from the camera during a brisk walk to the jail.

It is believed now that the case will go to trial in October.

For forcing down airliner

Israel condemned by U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Security Council Wednesday unanimously approved a resolution condemning Israel for intercepting an Arab airliner over Lebanon but refraining from any mention of sanctions aginst Israel. The United States joined in casting a rare vote against the Jewish state.

The resolution, originating with the Lebanese-led moderate wing of the Arab world, was sponsored by Britain and France.

It won out in two days of intensive private consultations over a non-aligned power measure containing an Egyptian call to withhold aid that might enable Israel to repeat the Beirut incident.

Ambassador Yosef Tekoah said after the vote that Israel would continue its "struggle against Arab terrorism" with "no quarter to the ruthless killers of the innocent. It will pursue them and strike at them until mankind is freed of their bloodthirsty savagery".

"The resolution adopted by the Security Council is the customary one-sided text that this organ has been producing on the Middle East situation," he said. "It closes its eyes completely to the grave menace of Arab terrorism which necessitated Israel's defensive action on Aug.10.

"The precise wording of the resolution is of lesser import than its primary significance, namely that the United Nations is unable to cope with international terrorism in general and with Arab terrorism in particular.

U.S. Ambassador John Scali had threatened to use the U.S. veto for the sixth time in U.N. history —the third in support of Israel —to block what Washington considered amounted to a call for sanctions against Israel.

The vote was a victory for Lebanon's stand that an American vote against Israel would be of greater value to the Arab cause than a U.S. veto of an anti-Israeli measure. Egypt held, diplomatic sources said, that a second U.S. veto in three weeks supporting Israel would embarrass Washington.

Scali said the U.S. vote for the condemnation of Israel was "a continuation of our efforts to extend the rule of law.

Seven Philadelphia men indicted in Muslim killings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seven Philadelphia men were indicted Wednesday by a Superior Court grand jury for the Jan. 18 murder of seven Hanafi Muslims at a Washington home donated to the sect by basketball star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

The killings set off speculation by officials about a feud between rival Muslim groups. But the U.S. Attorney's office refused to say whether the seven charged with conspiring to murder the Hanafis had any connection with such rival groups, and a spokesman for the Muslims in Philadelphia said, "We know nothing about them."

Named in the 23-count indictment were John W. Clark, William Christian, James Price, Ronald Harvey, John Griffin, Theodore Moody and Jeremy Sinclair. All were charged with murder, armed robbery and assault with intent to kill.

Harvey was arrested in Philadelphia June 28 on federal fugitive charges resulting from the June 8 slaying of Major Coxson, an ex-convict who ran unsuccessfully for mayor of Camden, N.J., earlier this year.

The indictment said the defendants drove from Philadelphia to Washington and met at a downtown hotel. The defendants also were charged with bringing pistols and shotguns to Washington.

Judges in Maryland won't try Agnew case

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — Chief U. S. District Judge Edward Northrop announced Wednesday that none of Maryland's nine federal judges —six of whom are Republicans — would handle any litigation involving Vice President Spiro T. Agnew that might stem from the current federal grand jury investigation.

Northrop asked Clement F. Haynsworth, chief judge of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, to designate a federal judge from outside Maryland to "supervise and handle all future matters arising from the inquiry of the special grand jury which in any matter whatever pertain to the vice president of the United States."

Northrop said "none of us will handle anything relating to the vice president" because of Agnew's "unique position" and his relations with the state of Maryland, where he was governor from 1967 until 1968, when he was nominated for vice president.

Housewives seek bargains as food prices mushroom

By United Press International

Mushrooming food price increases Wednesday caused even greater budget crises for householders scurrying through supermarkets in search of hard-to-find bargains.

In New York City, the Department of Consumer Affairs released statistics showing food prices jumped 4.5 per cent last week, the largest increase in at least three months.

Commissioner Betty Furness said, "We had anticipated price increases in meats and poultry but now those increases are also apparent in grain products such as bread and flour."

A breakdown of the marketbasket in the New York area showed bread and cereals up 10.1 per cent last week, meat and fish up 7.4 per cent and dairy products up 2.4 per cent.

Reports from other areas confirmed the general upward movement.

In Washington, D.C., the price of uncut chicken rose to 98 cents a pound up from 65 cents when phase IV went into effect July 18. The same trend was reported from other cities in the retail price of bread, eggs, milk and chicken.

Although food prices occupied the attention of houswives, the prices of other products, generally at the wholesale level, were occcupying the minds of manufacturers and government officials.

Kaiser Steel Corp. Wednesday joined other steel producers which have filed notice of price increases. Kaiser said its price hike request was "modest in relation to our cost increases."

On Tuesday the nation's two biggest steel companies, U.S. Steel and Bethlehem, said they had notified the Internal Revenue Service they plan to raise prices $8 to $12 a ton for sheet and strip steel prices. Under Phase IV rules, major companies must give 30 days notice before raising prices.

Other steel companies, Armco Steel, Republic, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Jones Laughlin, Wheeling-Pittsburgh and National Steel, also filed for increases.

Nixon: Innocent in Watergate

Nixon acknowledged he was "not precisely accurate" in saying previously that he did not learn of the September, 1971, burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist until he began his own Watergate investigation last March 21.

Actually, he said, he learned of the break-in March 17, four days before he began his inquiry, but even then he was told that no evidence had been received about the incident.

On April 18, he said, he learned the Justice Department was about to question Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt about the Ellsberg break-in. Because Hunt at the time was a member of the secret White House "plumbers" investigations unit, he said, he told Assistant Attorney General Henry E. Petersen —then in charge of the Watergate investigation —to "stick to the Watergate investigation and stay out of national security matters."

Nixon defended his use of the "plumbers" to try to stem leaks of secret national security documents, and his policy of authorizing wiretaps without a court order to protect internal security until he was overruled by the Supreme Court.

While declaring his innocence in Watergate, he promised that "in the future, my administration will be more vigilant in ensuring that such abuses do not take place, and that officials at every level understand that they are not to take place."

Said Nixon: "Let us not allow what a few overzealous people did in Watergate to tar the reputation of the millions of dedicated Americans who fought hard but clean for the candidates of their choice in 1972."

For himself, Nixon noted his landslide election last November and urged his nationwide audience to help him complete the goals he has set for his second term despite "those who would exploit Watergate."

The President said that only one of the 35 witnesses (obviously referring to Dean) who appeared before the Senate investigating committee —"a witness who offered no evidence beyond his own impressions" —gave even the slightest suggestion that he had knowledge of the planning for the Watergate break-in and that this had been contradicted "by every other witness in a position to know the facts."

Beyond this, Nixon said he had received repeated assurances both from Dean and other government investigators that no higher-ups were involved and did not learn the broader dimensions of the scandal until March 21.

"Because I trusted the agencies conducting the investigations and because I believed the reports I was getting, I did not believe the newspaper accounts that suggested a coverup," Nixon said in his speech.

"I was convinced that there was no coverup because I was convinced that no one had anything to cover up."

Much of Nixon's speech was devoted to an appeal for confidence in his leadership and a criticism of Senate investigators for what he said was transformation of inquiry into a political witchhunt.

"This investigation began as an effort to discover the facts about the break-in and bugging at the Democratic national headquarters and other campaign abuses," he said.

"As the weeks have gone by, it has become clear that both the hearings themselves and some of the commentaries from them have become increasingly absorbed in an effort to implicate the President personally in the illegal activities that took place."

The President said that because of an obsession with Watergate, vital matters of government "cry out for action now."

"We must not stay so mired in Watergate that we fail to respond to challenges of surpassing importance to America and the world," he said. "We cannot let an obsession with the past destroy our hopes for the future."

President won't give up tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said Wednesday he will continue his fight to deny White House tape recordings to Watergate investigators because it is more important to safeguard the President's ability to get frank advice from his advisers.

"I shall continue to oppose efforts which would set a precedent that would cripple all future Presidents by inhibiting conversations between them and those they look to for advice," Nixon said in his nationally televised address.

"This principle of confidentiality of presidential conversations is at stake in the question of the tapes. I must and shall oppose any efforts to destroy this principle, which is so vital to the conduct of the Presidency."

Nixon's explanation —his first direct statement —of his reasons for refusing to turn over tape recordings of his conversations with aides about the Watergate affair paralleled, in laymen's terms, the legal argument offered in court by his attorneys against demands for the material by the Senate Watergate investigating committee and by Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox. U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica has the arguments under advisement.

Nixon said "many have urged that in order to help prove the truth" of his denials that he had any part in the Watergate affair, he should turn over the tapes.

"However, a much more important principle is involved in this question than what the tapes might prove about Watergate," he said.

The President compared the right of Presidents to receive confidential and candid advice to the private status given to conversations between lawyers and their clients, clergymen and members of their congregations and husbands and wives.

"In each case, it is thought so important that the parties be able to talk freely to each other, that for hundreds of years the law has said that these conversations are 'privileged' and that their disclosure cannot be compelled," Nixon said.

He added that if he were to disclose the tapes "containing blunt and candid remarks on many different subjects, the confidentiality of the Office of the President would always be suspect."

"No one would want to advance tentative ideas that might later seem unsound. No diplomat would want to speak candidly in those sensitive negotiations which could bring peace or avoid war. No Senator would want to talk frankly about the congressional horse-trading that might get a vital bill passed. No one would want to speak bluntly about public figures, here and abroad."

Hanoi given warning

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon, taking another swipe at Congress, warned Hanoi Wednesday he would immediately seek permission for "appropriate actions" if North Vietnam took advantage of the U.S. bombing halt in Cambodia to mount a new military offensive.

Nixon's warning was contained in a lengthy statement issued by the White House about 12 hours after the congressionally imposed bombing cutoff went into effect at midnight Tuesday.

The Defense Department said the last bombs were dropped in Cambodia by two F4 Phantom jet fighter-bombers, which dumped their 500-pound loads at 11:45 p.m. EDT —15 minutes before the halt went into effect.

"It should be clearly understood in Hanoi that the President will work with Congress in order to take appropriate actions if North Vietnam mounts an offensive which jeopardizes stability in Indochina and threatens to overturn the settlements reached after so much sacrifice by so many for so long," the White House said.

Service stations to close

Dow Jones-Ottaway News

BALA-CYNWYD — About 6,000 of Pennsylvania's 10,000 service stations may close down for the three-day Labor Day weekend in protest over a Cost of Living Council cutback on dealers' profit margins the Pennsylvania Association of Service Station Dealers said.

(Many Monroe County service station owners were unaware of the protest action. Station owners aware of the protest said they would be open as usual).

Thomas J. Anderson, executive director of the association, said 1,700 members voted unanimously to close down Sept. 1, 2 and 3 and telephone reaction from other dealer-members makes him 'confident' most will go along with the shutdown.

Judge refuses to delay trial for Mitchell, Stans

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Federal judge Wednesday denied a defense motion to postpone the trial of former Nixon cabinet members Maurice Stans and John N. Mitchell in the Vesco conspiracy case.

Judge Lee P. Gagliardi announced from the bench that he had notified all the lawyers involved that "the case will proceed on Sept. 11th" barring unforseen circumstances.

Defense lawyers had argued earlier this month that because of their clients' involvement in the Watergate investigation and the Watergate publicity they needed more time to prepare.

Gagliardi's announcement came during a hearing on a charge by former Commerce Secretary Stan's attorney that "overzealous prosecutors" had obtained from one of Stan's lawyers information covered by the "attorney-client privilege."

Defense attorney Walter J. Bonner said that if it could be shown that such information had gone to the prosecutors the indictment against Stans should be dismissed.

Stans, along with former Attorney General Mitchell, former New Jersey State Senate Majority Leader Harry L. Sears, and fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco, are accused of conspiring to have Stans and Mitchell pressure the Securities and Exchange Commission into going easy in an investigation of Vesco's financial dealings.

Magruder told truth, polygraph test shows

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jeb Stuart Magruder was reported Wednesday to have passed a lie detector test supporting his allegation that former Attorney General John N. Mitchell approved the Watergate break-in.

The Washington Star-News, quoting "reliable sources," said Magruder, former deputy director of the Nixon campaign, took the test on orders from federal prosecutors some time between April 14 and May 2.

Magruder has acknowledged that he had lied the first time he appeared before the Watergate grand jury and during the January trial of the seven original Watergate defendants. The Star-News said the results of the lie detector test indicated he was telling the truth when he went to federal prosecutors April 14 and offered to tell all he knew. He testified before the grand jury a third time on May 2.

The lie detector test "is considered by the prosecution to lend some credence to Magruder's version" of the Watergate story, the newspaper said.

Magruder told the Senate Watergate committee that Mitchell gave final approval on March 30, 1972, at Key Biscayne, Fla., to Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy's scaled-down plan to eavesdrop on Democratic headquarters at the Watergate complex.

Mitchell later denied this, saying he rejected the plan outright. Another participant in the Key Biscayne meeting, Mitchell aide Frederick C. LaRue, testified that Mitchell said only that the matter did not have to be decided at that time.

It has been reported that Magruder agreed to plead guilty to a single charge in exchange for his cooperation with the prosecutors.

Nearly $5,000 spent on fair's electrical facilities

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

GILBERT — Nearly $5,000 has been spent for the installation of new electrical facilities at the West End Fairgrounds in preparation for the 52nd annual West End Fair.

Directors of the fair association are now considering whether to install one of four proposed transformers for the new lines, before the kick-off of the fair on Tuesday, Aug. 28.

The fair association was hoping to reach a final decision on the transformer at their regular meeting Tuesday night, but electrician James Frailey left the meeting before the matter could be brought up.

Fair association officials expressed concern that they had not received an updated report from Frailey on the new electrical set-up since May.

Although the job is not completed as yet, the directors estimated that Frailey is approximately $600 over his original estimate of $4,214.15 to install the new electrical system.

The fair officers suggested that needed tree trimming might have been responsible for some of the extra costs.

The assocation authorized the fair officers and the grounds committee to meet with Frailey as soon as possible to get an updated report on the electrical situation, to discuss the charges for the construction thus far, and to decide whether the transformer should be installed for the fair this year.

Monroe County Sheriff Forrest Sebring reported to the directors that all security would be taken care of for this years' fair with a similar setup as in previous years.

He stressed that the security officers, who are paid by the county to work at the fair, would not just be working for the fair association, but would be there to protect each individual who attends the fair this year.

He said the volunteers involved were "even too glad to do it," especially in light of the recent tragedy in East Bangor, when a teenager was stabbed to death as a result of an argument at a carnival.

Sebring said that seven or eight men would be stationed in the parking lot throughout the fair and said eight to 10-hour shifts would be overlapping throughout the week.

Fair Association President Paul Everett agreed to look into the possibility of having county Boy Scout troops clean up the fairgrounds each morning during fair week.

The directors unanimously decided to purchase an air conditioner for the main fair office.

Elmer Kreger reported to the association that Rte. 209 would be open again by the time the fair opens, so that all traffic traveling south would not have to be diverted by the fairground's road.

Everett explained that this year, anyone bringing livestock to the fair would be responsible for cleaning out their own animal's stalls each morning.

In preparation for the fair, Everett reported that the ponds to the rear of the fairgrounds have been filled in completely, the old rest stand has been moved between the fair office and the poultry building and has been partially enclosed, and a 40-foot pole barn addition to the poultry exhibit house has been completed.

Susan Anderson, who is in charge of the 4-H exhibits at the fair, asked the directors for permission to put on a guide dog demonstration and 20-minute film on the subject.

The association agreed to cooperate with the Monroe County Park Commission in spraying the fairgrounds for mosquitoes for fair week.

Questionnaires receiving Hamilton Twp. answers

Record County Bureau

SCIOTA — Approximately one third of the Hamilton Township residents and landowners who have returned planning questionnaires thus far have indicated they are in favor of zoning.

The questionnaires were distributed last week to residents by the Hamilton Township Planning Commission in an effort to solicit information and opinions in preparing a local comprehensive plan and a zoning ordinance.

Of the 61 forms returned to planning secretary Elmer Kiefer thus far, 22 residents said they were for zoning and 19 responses indicated the township should be kept rural.

Kiefer indicated that nearly 2,000 forms have been distributed by the Hamilton Township Boy Scouts and that most of the forms collected by the troop will not be returned until Monday night.

He said he was pleased with the initial response from residents, however, and indicated that many forms are being returned to him every day by mail.

Approximately 12 residents indicated they were in favor of local police protection and another five people said they wanted some type of local law enforcement.

One-fifth of the responses thus far have asked for municipal trash collection, three people have expressed objections to junk cars in the township and five people have asked for better support of the Blue Ridge Hook and Ladder Company.

One-twelfth of the people responding so far have asked about insect control; one-tenth have requested central sewerage.

Other scattered comments suggested that regular planning commission meetings be advertized well in advance, that a playground area be set aside in the township and that local quarries be regulated.

Historical sites to be preserved so far, as suggested by the residents' comments, include the Quiet Valley Farm, the Hamilton Square church and cemetery, the Shafer Schoolhouse, the old mill on Business Rte. 209 in Snydersville, and the old mill at Kellersville.

According to Kiefer, other comments regarding wet areas in the township and other technical information will prove most valuable in preparing a zoning ordinance.

The next regular meeting of the planning commission will be held at 7:30 p.m., Monday at the township municipal building in Sciota.

Kiefer encouraged local residents to attend the session and said any inquiries about the questionnaire could be answered at that time.

Trio of strings to highlight recreation area concert

COLUMBIA, N.J. — A trio of strings will highlight the next performance at the Water Gate Recreational Site of the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area Aug. 25.

The 7:30 p.m. Saturday performance will feature Veronica Jacobs on the viola with Geoffry Michaels and Larry Gold on the violin and cello.

The concert is the next to last in the series of Saturday night performances in the park's concert area one half-mile south of Millbrook, N.J. The concerts are cosponsored by the Artists for Environment Foundation.

Those attending the performance should bring something to sit on and a flashlight for after the outdoor performance. In case of rain, the concert will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, Blairstown, N.J.

EDCNP executive unit reviews proposed laws

AVOCA — Proposed legislation for disaster preparedness, revenue sharing, and preferential tax assessment for agricultural land were reviewed by the Executive Committee of the Economic Development Council of Northeastern Pennsylvania at a recent meeting.

According to Howard Grossman, EDCNP Executive Director, the proposed Federal Disaster Preparedness Assistance Act of 1973, Better Communities Act, and State Farm Land Assessment Act of 1973, have been analyzed by the Council's staff and supported in principle by the Council's Executive Committee.

The Disaster Preparedness and Assistance Act of 1973 is the result of a study conducted by a task force under the co-chairmanship of General G.A. Lincoln of the Office of Emergency Preparedness (OEP) and Frank Carlucci, then Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

According to the Administration, the act "represents a comprehensive program to standardize benefits for all victims of disasters, improve execution of the assistance program, prevent the misuse of benefits, strengthen preventive measures to minimize future losses, and increase the role of State and local governments in implementing the disaster program."

Under the proposed act, an applicant for a loan or grant "must make provisions to obtain and maintain insurance when reasonably available, adequate, and necessary to cover property replaced, restored, repaired or constructed with assistance under this act."

It further provides that no assistance will be given in any future disaster for any property given assistance unless insurance has been purchased.

Here's to Milford truck battle

It may seem quixotic for the Borough of Milford to take on the gargantuan trucking industry, but something has to be done about the problems too many trucks create, and we're pleased to see council acting in a determined manner to do it.

Milford already has enacted an "objectionable noise" ordinance, but is having trouble enforcing it. Perhaps with a better engineered limited parking ordinance for trucks, enforcement will not pose such a problem.

Of course, keeping the big trucks that frequent the borough's streets from clogging main thoroughfares won't do anything about the continuous streams of wheeled behemoths away from Rte. 209 through the heart of Milford, but the simultaneous assault upon the state to have truck traffic barred from that highway is already aimed at that problem.

We don't think it is realistic to expect favorable results from that plea. But then, if you don't try something, you'll never know, will you? And if enough of a ruckus is raised, the truckers' association might just take it upon itself to see if some of that traffic can be re-routed along Interstate Rte. 84 and Rte. 402 and away from overloaded, dangerous and offensive Rte. 209.

There has been much talk from many quarters about the unsuitability of 209 for truck traffic, but this is the first time someone has rolled up his sleeves and tried energetically to do something about it. More power to the Borough of Milford and lots of luck.

If the borough is successful, many more people will benefit, not the least of whom will be the unfortunate woman whose letter to the editor elsewhere on this page chronicles a sad and bitter tale of lost sleep and personal misery, all brought about by a mass of truck traffic no one foresaw when Rte. 209 was built and lined with homes.

You can fight vandals

"Get involved" is the plea we make, and we address it to those people who live around vandalism-prone areas, notably the West End Playground.

Vandalism takes its toll in many ways, not the least of which is the cost to prevent it — 'round-the-clock surveillance costs money, and a lot of it.

Monroe County Park Commission chairman Elmer Kreger is right in calling for parents in the area to help. Some of those parents may have children who are participating in the vandalism spree. The help they can give is obvious.

For the others, it is as simple as keeping their eyes open and not being afraid to take a hand in curbing the senseless violence against property. In effect, don't be afraid to call the police when you see suspicious activity around the area. Sometimes just a shout or two ("Hey! What're you doin' over there?") will do the trick and frighten the vandals off.

We wouldn't suggest taking out after them, with or without arms. The consequences of either action could be a lot worse than the damage vandals do to property. Lives are at stake in a situation like that.

But being vigilant costs little and can save a lot. Give it a try. It could wind up much cheaper than having to pay for 24-hour police protection, and could be just as effective.

Sounds like new brand

A young Army doctor stationed in the South Pacific was stumped about the treatment of one of his patients. He radioed the base hospital, "Have case of Beriberi. What shall I do?" A psychiatrist got hold of the radio and this was his reply: "Give it to the Marines, they'll drink anything."

But money has no father

"They say he married her because her uncle left her a million dollars."

"Oh I don't think he's that kind of a boy. I think he'd have married her no matter who left it to her."

It strikes quickly

From a 17-year-old senior:

"You know you're mature when you realize the girl sitting next to you can be more than just a classmate."

The French connection

Noel Coward once told a newspaper interviewer that he disliked flying and much preferred to cross the Atlantic by ship. "And," added Coward, "not by any ship — only on a French liner."

"And why is that?" asked the reporter.

"Because the French have done away with that silly rule that in case of disaster, women and children first."

Myth as weapon

It seems to be one of the distinguishing features of our time that so may supposed events, full of symbolic meaning and arousing profound emotion, did not in fact happen.

Only recently we have had the - I suppose relatively minor - examples of the dike bombing in North Vietnam, the supposed carpet bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong, and the supposed destruction of a hospital. All of these were widely credited. All helped influence opinion. But none of them occurred.

Goering and Guernica

Reaching further back in time, it is now fairly clear that the widely received account of Guernica is almost surely false. The Nazis are supposed to have terror - bombed that Basque village, and Herman Goering is even widely believed to have admitted this at Nuremberg. The evidence now available to scholars, however, suggests that the Germans bombed military targets in and around Guernica, that some Italian bombs may have fallen on civilian targets through error, but that there was no "terror bombing." A forthcoming issue of National Review will print several articles on these points, including one that explodes the Goering item. Goering said nothing at Nuremberg about Guernica. Nevertheless, Guernica remains one of the potent political myths of the 20th century.

National Reveiw, by the way, has been doing very useful work recently regarding other widely credited political myths.

In the current issue, Francis Russell presents convincing evidence that Nicola Sacco, executed in Charlestown State Prison, Mass., on August 23, 1927, actually was guilty of murder as charged. The evidence regarding Vanzetti remains less conclusive. Yet Sacco and Vanzetti are for many the working - class martyrs of the century.

During the past fortnight we have seen the birth of another political myth, which may or may not be based on fact. According to a story published in the London Times under the byline of Father Adrian Hastings, Portuguese forces in Mozambique killed all or nearly all of the 400 inhabitants of the village of Wiriyamu, and then burned the village to the ground.

It is not impossible that such an event did occur, yet there are features of the whole affair that raise doubts, as noted by James Burnham of, again, National Review.

Reports from unnamed priests

Father Hastings does not claim to have witnessed the massacre, but to have received reports from unnamed Spanish priests. These, in turn, were not witnesses either, but received the information from a few victims who "managed to escape by flight." These victims who managed to escape seem to have been remarkably literate for African villagers: they supplied the names, ages, and sex of a couple of hundred of the dead, and even supplied details of the supposed killings, including last words. According to Father Hastings, all this was part of a "genocidal" campaign by the Portuguese. Yet the government forces in Mozambique are 70 per cent native, difficult to imagine in a "genocidal" campaign.

Finally, though the supposed massacre allegedly took place seven months ago, the Hastings story surfaced only a week before the visit of Portuguese Premier Marcello Caetano's visit to England to celebrate the 600th anniversay of the British - Portuguese alliance.

There is much more to say about this particular story.

But apropos of the modern use of political myth. It springs, I think, from the combination of rapid communications and the existence of a mass audience. Masses tend to be moved by emotion, and to think in terms of symbol and image rather than in words and careful distinctions. And modern communications permit the easy manipulation of those symbols. And note: Not many of these political myths do the West much good.

Progress against breast cancer

X-rays of the breast, or mammography, have been a great boon to the early detection, treatment and control of cancer of the breast. By this method, non-cancerous cystic masses can almost definitely be differentiated from those that are malignant.

In addition, the technique of thermography sensitively measures the heat of the skin surfaces of the breast. This, too, is of great value in the diagnosis of breast tumors.

Now, an additional diagnostic aid has been tried by Dr. Bernard A. Eskin, at the Philadelphia Medical College of Pennsylvania.

It is known as the "iodine uptake study" which previously has been so valuable in the diagnosis of thyroid disease.

This new test seems to be a highly sensitive method which, in addition to those already in use, will add to the lifesaving statistics about cancer of the breast.

Microscopic photographs can now be taken of the cells that surround an ulcer of the stomach and the duodenum.

Pictures of these tiny areas can show the presence of damaged cells and their deterioration.

Dr. Shirley Siew has been able to demonstrate these changes in cellular tissue, giving doctors a better understanding of the complexities of peptic ulcers.

Areas of the body in the deepest, closed cavities are revealing their secrets because of the many ingenious devices that can be introduced for their exploration.

The pancreas is a small, but very important, gland in the body. It lies behind the stomach and plays a vital role in diabetes and in other hormone disturbances.

Only recently, Dr. Eugene I. Winkelman, a specialist in gastro-enterology at the Cleveland Clinic in Ohio, added valuable information about the relationship between the pancreas and excess fat in the blood stream.

This observation is important in the treatment of a type of pancreatitis that previously resisted treatment.

The newer knowledge that a low fat diet can reduce the severity of this kind of pancreatitis, and prevent its recurrence, is of extreme importance in the practice of medicine.

This kind of research constantly emphasizes that grants to dedicated scientists must continue uninterrupted.

Letters TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for returning pocketbook

Editor, The Record:

I would like to openly express my gratitude to the person or persons who turned in the pocketbook to the Warehouse Foods Store office.

As I was hurredly placing my groceries in the car, I left my pocketbook in a shopping cart in the parking lot. After returning home I discovered it wasn't on my person. I made the trip back to Warehouse Foods with the thought it would be made in vain.

When I entered the building, the checker informed me the person called to me, but I was already driving away. The contents of that pocketbook were more valuable to me than the actual cash it contained.

A few years ago my daughter found a bank money bag containing a large sum of money. We took it to the Stroudsburg Police headquarters, and within minutes, the owner walked in to claim it. I now know how that man felt when he arrived.

Whoever you are, thank you, and may God bless you.

Rte. 209 gives insomnia

Editor, The Record:

I am desperate for sleep.

When we bought our house some years ago in the Minisink Hills area, Rte. 209 was a quiet lane where my husband and I could walk leisurely after supper, hand in hand.

Now we are searching desperately to get away — not too far, but to another home where the noise will be less so I can sleep at night.

Last night, walking together away from the traffic noises, a friend offered me her bed so I could recover from four sleepless nights.

Must I separate from my husband and family to be relieved of the misery that distresses us all?

System does work

WASHINGTON — Sooner or later, Sen. Sam Ervin, jowls wobbling and brows popping, will loose upon the country another Biblican admonition: Woe unto the world because of offenses! For it must needs be that offenses come; but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh.

That one seems a natural for the wise old senator because it proclaims the inevitability that man will transgress and the requirement that he be deterred. This is forgotten today by many who, sickened by scandal piled upon scandal, fear the American system has gone sour and no longer works. But before we give up on it, let's recall just what our system is and what it is not.

If the noble experiment of 1776 had been based on the hope that American officials would be naturally honest and decent, that presidents and generals would never lie, that bureaucrats would uphold the law, that judges would always be just and that congressmen wouldn't cheat, we would have to concede that their scheme had turned out a sorry fiasco.

But the government was founded upon the opposite assumption: that rulers may be conditioned and constrained to do right but, in their natural state, they must ever be suspect of the worst follies and sins.

Homo politicus

So it was that the fathers inscribed on our founding documents an indictment of homo politicus, per se, and a litany of the iniquities of George III, along with a prediction that his American successors would turn out no better if left to their own resorts.

The fathers set about restricting the mischief of officialdom by limiting its powers and by dividing up such powers as were permitted among different branches, so that each might act as a check on the others. A large portion was left to the people and the press, along with the obligation to act as watchdog.

But we forget our constitutional obligation to be exacting taskmasters toward the temporary stewards who use our money and authority. We backslide and begin to equate citizenship with mere obedience, and patriotism with symbols, songs and reverence toward office holders. And we get a secret war in Cambodia, an ITT case, a Watergate.

Does this mean our structure of state is foundering? I think not. Our fathers protected us against our own negligence. The American system was constructed like a battleship, with successive rings of watertight compartments. At any given time, only one or two need hold to keep the ship afloat.

If all checks collapse

When the threat comes, say from the presidency as in Watergate, the structure sinks only if all its checks collapse - only if the press fails to expose, the opposition party declines to oppose, the public neglects to care, Congress refuses to resist, the courts demur from the law.

In the light of Watergate, how has the system held up? Transgressions came against our liberties, against decency, against the law, against the electoral process itself, as our forefathers had foreseen.

But even the trespassers were restrained by our traditions. It may be said for the President and the men around him that they attempted no frontal coup. Their illegalities were attempted on the sly; their aggrandizements were pressed only as far as the traffic could bear.

The response? Some reporters did their job of investigation. The opposition party went to court and, though tempted to settle for money, refused to do so. A slow trickle of truth began inexorably to command events. Public indignation built up, slowly but surely. Congress, led by a venerable gentleman from North Carolina, who for many years has carried a copy of the Constitution around in his pocket, rose to the occasion.

Men are prone to look first at outward appearances. To many of our people and to querulous populations around the globe, America must appear in torment and turmoil: the President on the run, the FBI and CIA compromised, the government paralyzed, the market jittery, TV serials interrupted, all started by a little break - in.

Yet the ill wishers must begin to wonder at this marvel of liberty, as they see the leader of the foremost nation of the world, who commands great armies and treasuries, waiting flumly upon the verdict of a free people as to what was the truth about a burglary.

For me, it is a spectacle to set the spine tingling with that boyhood pride of country.

Britain's delayed action

Aid to beaten wives

By YORICK BLUMENFELD

LONDON — An old English proverb blithely asserts that, "A spaniel, a woman and a walnut tree, the more they're beaten the better they be." While the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals now takes care of the spaniels and the Department of the Environment looks after the walnut trees, no one protects the wife in her own home.

Prime Minister Edward Heath, a bachelor, appeared embarrassed when he agreed in the House of Commons last month to have a "dossier of domestic cruelty" investigated immediately. The cases compiled by Labor M.P. Jack Ashley were so horrendous that no one could ignore them. One involved a woman whose baby was stillborn because she had been kicked in the stomach while pregnant.

The press was quick to take up the call for action. The Observer cited the case history of a woman it called Margaret, aged 24, with two children. Her husband, a self - employed engineer, began beating her two days after their wedding. Despite a $70 fine for assault — or maybe because of it — the beatings continued. The police did nothing. They contended that it was not their job to enforce injunctions of the court.

Wife-beating hardly is a new phenomenon. Wives have been subjected to brutality at the hands of their spouses since being proverbially dragged out of the cave by their hair. One of the most harrowing scenes in all of Dickens is Bill Sikes' fatal beating of his wife, Nancy, in Oliver Twist. Nevertheless, the problem of violence in marriage is rarely talked about in England.

An act of Parliament dating from 1878 permits a married woman to seek a separation order from magistrate's court if her husband is convicted of assaulting her. But few wives have resorted to this procedure. The reason, as Heath told Parliament, is that the typical battered wife is afraid to give evidence against her husband.

Policemen, moreover, generally hesitate to interfere in domestic affairs except when really serious injury is involved. To that, Ashley says: "My argument has been that the police go to great lengths to avoid taking action against husbands guilty of criminal assault, thereby encouraging vicious husbands."

An article in The Observer by Louis Blom-Cooper, a Queen's Counselor, provoked a flood of angry letters from married women and social workers. They objected to his assertion that many people in England "do not ordinarily think of violence between husband and wife as criminal behavior." In fact, he went on, an occasional beating "is part of a relationship which gives some satisfaction to both parties."

Many of those who wrote in reply pointed to the helpless position of the beaten wife: The police turn a blind eye, legal aid may be unobtainable, and the housing shortage makes it nearly impossible to pack up and move out. Mrs. Erin Pizzey, who runs a Women's Aid center in Chiswick, said that women who left their homes because of "domestic muggings" are not considered homeless by local authorities.

Parliament has now directed chief constables and police authorities to pay closer attention to battered-wife cases. In addition, Ashley has called for "a radical transformation in the attitude of the police." One is left with the suspicion, however, that very little will change — until such time as Parliament is asked to take up the problem of the battered husband.

Physician claims radiation causes cancer

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A noted physician-physicist Wednesday picked up where he left off in a 1969 dispute with the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC), charging greater numbers of nuclear power plants could mean greater doses of radioactivity and increases in cancer, leukemia and heart disease.

Dr. John W. Gofman, a professor of medical physics at the University of California, appeared during the second day of state Insurance Department hearings on the insurance risk posed by nuclear power plants.

Gofman, embroiled four years ago in a controversy with the AEC over its allowable limits on radiation, charged that AEC standards governing "permissible doses" of radiation "are now, as they have always been, a fraud perpetrated upon the public." In 1969, Gofman claimed AEC standards could have caused 32,000 additional cases of leukemia.

"There is no question that the AEC has tried in the past and still does try to suggest directly and obliquely that 'permissible' doses are 'safe,' " he added.

Gofman stated that "beyond any reasonable doubt" radiation will produce "virtually all forms of human cancer and human leukemia . . . in direct proportion to dose."

He also cited a study which showed swine exposed to radiation and fed a fatty diet producing atherosclerosis suffered coronary deaths within five months.

"There is no doubt radiation will produce mutations and resultant diseases and deaths. We must expect extra deaths in direct proportion to radiation dose delivered," Gofman said. "Therefore any AEC authorized 'permissible dose' is a permit to plan willful murder."

James F. Moore, manager of Westinghouse Nuclear Energy Systems, told the hearing that nuclear power was a "safe, reliable method of generating electric power" to meet increasing public demands.

Moore pointed out that in "150 reactor years of operation of our nuclear power program no member of the public has ever been killed or injured from any reactor-related accident."

The witness described as "far out" assumptions in AEC reports in 1957 and 1965 which envisioned a major nuclear plant accident causing many deaths and billions of dollars in property damage.

"Our view of 'conservative' estimates of potential losses set forth in these (AEC) reports is that they are totally unrealistic and based on wholly imaginary, fairy tale-type circumstances," Moore concluded.

Earlier in the hearings, state Insurance Commissioner Herbert Denenberg presented a "Citizens Bill of Rights on Nuclear Power."

Murderer killed over 200

NEW YORK (UPI) — Herman Webster Mudgett may have been one of the champion mass murderers of all time.

Eighty years ago, the one-time medical student was accused of killing more than 200 women in Chicago and burying their bodies in his basement.

According to the recently published book "Bloodletters and Badmen," by Jay Robert Nash, Mudgett was born in Germantown, N.H., and studied medicine at Ann Arbor, Mich.

He was expelled for taking out insurance policies under various names and then stealing, disfiguring and burying cadavers from the university dissecting room and collecting insurance on them.

Mudgett moved to Chicago and changed his name to Harry Howard Holmes, according to Nash's book, where he became a confidence man and swindler, then bought a drugstore.

He later purchased a vacant lot across the street and erected a bizarre three-story building of turrets and towers, hidden rooms, concealed stairways, trap doors, false walls and ceilings.

Mudgett allegedly lured to the house scores of women, mostly young girls he had hired as "secretary-typists," getting them to sign over their assets and insurance policies to him and killing them with lethal gas.

In 1894, after the house had been burned and boarded up, Chicago police entered the building and found the remains of over 200 corpses in the basement, Nash said.

Reaches lowest level

Fighting fades around Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Ground fighting around Phnom Penh faded Wednesday to its lowest level in months as U.S. bombing in Cambodia ended after 160 consecutive days of round-the-clock raids.

With the Indochina air war — the longest in history —finally at an end, the high command reported only four minor contacts between government troops and insurgent forces which have fallen back in the past 10 days to positions averaging nine miles from the capital.

In Washington, President Nixon marked the cessation of U.S. bombing with a warning to North Vietnam not to take advantage of the situation. In a statement 12 hours after the bombing was halted, the President said he would go back to Congress for permission "to take appropriate actions" if Communist forces threatened stability of Southeast Asia.

The last U.S. bombs, according to the Pentagon, were dropped by two F4 Phantom jets at 11:45 p.m. EDT —15 minutes before the bombing halt officially became effective. The Defense Department said they destroyed four structures and damaged three others. The last B52 bomb load was dropped eight minutes earlier.

American pilots were enthusiastic about the end of the daily bombing and the raids that have been flown openly and in secret over Cambodia for the past 4½ years.

Another pilot radioed that there was only 15 minutes to go before the 11 a.m. halt and asked if he should drop his bombs anyway. "Negative," the air controller replied. "Do not expend any more. Cease air activities."

Beef freeze injunction rejected

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A suit by an eastern Pennsylvania meat dealer seeking an injunction against the government's beef price ceiling was rejected Wednesday by a federal judge here.

U.S. District Judge Louis C. Bechtle ruled that the plaintiff, Harvey Nathan, 28, owner of Salsburg's Meats Inc., Shillington, Pa., failed to prove the beef freeze had caused him "irreparable harm."

Nathan, who brought the suit on behalf of all meat retailers, claimed the ceiling on beef prices was costing him between $3,000 and $4,000 in losses weekly. The suit also charged the regulation violated the Constitution in preventing other retailers from "earning a living."

Too many generals in U.S. military

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., said Wednesday he will move to cut back the number of high-level military officers, claiming there are more generals and admirals now than at the height of World War II.

"The ratio of high-ranking officers to enlisted men is far out of proportion," Mondale said in a statement. He said there are more three and four-star generals in uniform today than in World War II when the military was four times as large. He said the Army had seven recruits for each sergeant 25 years ago but now has more sergeants than recruits.

"The grade structure has become so top-heavy with high-ranking officers that it's shaped not like a pyramid, but like a balloon," Mondale said.

The senator proposed two amendments to the Defense Department authorization bill which would cut 156,100 military men, including 20,300 officers, and also reduce civilian employes by 65,000.

He estimated the cuts would save taxpayers slightly more than $2 billion a year.

Mondale said "grade creep" in the military has gotten out of hand. "Colonels drawing well over $20,000 a year are used to carry around charts and hold pointers during Pentagon briefings.

Money surplus

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With an $11 billion turnaround, the United States came up with the first surplus in its balance of payments on a reserves transaction basis since 1969 at the end of June, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

Ann Landers

Emotions at fault

Dear Ann Landers: I am not much of a writer but I have something to say that might help a lot of people. Please, Ann, fix up my English and print my letter. I am 29-years-old and have some advice for bed-wetters. At least nine out of ten bed-wetters would like to blame their bladder of their kidneys, but the problem is rarely physical. It's almost always emotional.

My parents used to fight something awful. The screaming was terrible. One night there was a bad accident. All five of us kids were put into a children's home. My older sister stopped wetting her bed a few months later. My younger brothers and I kept on.

I was spanked and made to wash the bedsheets by hand. I even had my face rubbed with the wet sheets. I was threatened and told I would have to sleep in the bathtub with no pillows or blankets. For one week they woke me up all night long at three-hour intervals. It didn't help. The bed was wet in the morning.

One day a wonderful teacher told me that worrying and being afraid of things didn't solve problems. She suggested that I train myself to relax at night and put everything out of my mind except comforting thoughts. She told me to talk to myself, to say, "Relax toes," and then to wiggle them and rest. Next, "Relax ankles," rotate them and relax. "Relax knees," and so on. Then she told me to concentrate on my pillow — how soft and comfortable it was. Next, my mattress, how firm and smooth. Then the blankets, how fluffy and warm. Finally I would be completely relaxed and fall asleep.

She suggested light exercise before going to bed and sometimes a cup of warm milk. It all helped.

To every adult bed-wetter, I say this: You can't expect the problem to disappear overnight. And you can be sure there will be periodic relapses, but don't be discouraged. I have been married five years and the program I have outlined has changed me from a constant bed-wetter to almost never.

Victory At Last

Dear Victory: Here's your letter and I didn't have to do much fixing at all. Thanks for your suggestions. I'm willing to bet you've helped a great many people today. And THAT thought should help you sleep like a baby tonight.

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest your letters about "telephonaholics" or "yakking housewives." I am married to one and I can tell you it's more than a nuisance. It's a threat to our marriage.

My wife is on the phone when I come home from work. I usually take the dinner off the stove or out of the oven and eat with the kids. She waves at me when I come into the kitchen but she makes no move to get off the phone. Many evenings I bathe the kids and put them to bed because my wife is busy yakking.

She claims our marriage is failing because of lack of communication. How can we communicate when she is always on the phone?

Please keep telling those yakkers to get off the horn and look around. They might be surprised at what they see.

Married To One

Dear Married: I'd like to suggest that your wife make one more call — to a marriage counselor. The two of you need to sit down together to air your grievances. Your wife is talking on the phone because she doesn't want to talk to YOU. It's her escape. When she is able to face this she'll have made the first move toward real communication.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a Canadian who is sick and tired of traveling in the United States and running into dumbbells who don't know one single thing about us. They think we live in igloos, travel by dog sled and hibernate six months out of the year.

Every Canadian schoolchild learns about the United States. What's the matter with your schools that they don't teach you anything about us? The further south we traveled the more ignorant the people were. I know your column appears all over, so please publish my letter. —

Maple Leaf

Dear Maple: Sorry you've been running into ignoramuses. Every country has its share, you know. I apologize and ask you not to condemn us all on the basis of a poor sampling.

Love lost

By Jean Adams

NO ACTION: (Q.) In May of 1972 I met a guy named Mark. We went together that summer. He is now in the service. When he comes home he doesn't call me, and when he is away he doesn't write me.

When I get a chance to talk to him (which is seldom), he says he still loves me.

He means the world to me and I love him so much. But I am unsure of his real feelings because he makes no effort to keep in touch with me or have a date with me.

Please tell me how I can keep him.

Forsaken in Florida

(A.) It seems to me that if you had Mark's love or more - than - casual interest you have lost it. His statements about love with no actions to back them up are empty and false. He seems to count you as part of his past.

Stop hoping he will change. Turn your attention to some other young man with whom you will at least have a chance for a future.

FRIENDSHIP: (Q.) I hope you answer this letter because I really don't know what to do. I like Sandy, but she is a different color from me. I don't know whether I should keep up our friendship or drop it.

Doubtful in D.C.

(A.) There is no reason to drop a friend, no matter what color she or he is. We all should have friends of all kinds, and keep them.

If, however, Sandy should become more than a friend, you and she should ask yourselves many questions. Both of you should be very sure how you feel about each other and about the future.

The only way you could be sure would be to talk it out, at length, until you know where you stand and where she stands, and she knows the same about herself and about you.

On being over 49

Elderly should prepare

By a 69er

When we were Boy Scouts, quite some time ago, the motto was "Be Prepared."

That still applies to us and is very important.

For instance, do you have an emergency file?

Suppose you have a stroke or are unconscious after an accident!

Does your wife or husband or children know where to find the extra key to your house or apartment or safety deposit box?

Do they know where your insurance information is?

Do they know where your house deed, car title, marriage certificate and other papers are located?

This is why a page or folder of vital information, kept where your wife or husband can easily find it, is very valuable.

And do not stop there. Give a copy to a son or daughter or lawyer. Remember that a lot of couples both die in one accident these days.

And just because you feel you are "poor" don't let that stop you from taking these precautions. If you have only a little property or money it is all the more important that your survivor get it at the least cost and worry.

An emergency file is especially important for a husband to write since women generally live about four years longer than men, according to insurance tables. But this is no excuse for a woman not to make a similar file. Note the following facts:

Even before making an emergency file every retiree should carry in his or her wallet a card telling who to notify in case of accident, giving address and phone number. Give two names in case one is not available.

If you regularly need special pills or injections for an illness be sure to note this on that card.

Now as to making out your file:

1. List accurately where to find all your records, such as insurance policies, pension information, military facts (in case of severe illness, can you be taken to a veteran's hospital?) and investments.

2. List who you owe what — debts, mortgage, etc.

3. List all checking and saving accounts, credit union, etc. If you have money hidden away note where it is and put in a sealed envelope. Give to someone you trust, to open after your death.

4. List in detail the Social Security, savings, pension, insurance and investments that your wife or husband can expect after your death.

5. List where to find all valuable personal property, jewels, antiques and expensive items.

6. Keep your income tax information for the past three years. The IRS can check on your income three years back even though your income may have been small.

7. List any special preferences you have for a lawyer or funeral director or for any other matter. Note where to be buried.

Finally, especially note that we have not mentioned two very important things to do in regard to your retirement income. These are writing a will and, if you are married, providing the right of survivorship in your financial accounts. No matter how small your income these will save your survivor money.

We will discuss these two matters in our next column.

Soda pop firms bottle up bill

By GAIL NEVINS

STROUDSBURG — At a long moment in time when Monroe County and several others around the state need less solid waste clogging almost nonexistent disposal facilities, a powerful consortium of carbonated drink lobbies has fizzed to a head and knocked the taxpaying consumer flat. It was not unexpected.

The bill sponsored by State Senator T. Newell Wood (patterned after the successful Oregon law) that would require consumer deposits on beverage containers and ban the flip-top can, has itself been canned.

According to an account by Philadelphia Inquirer reporter William Ecenbarger, the legislation has been buried in committee by an interesting assortment of lobbyists who have bluntly informed the lawmakers that the bill is definitely not their "real thing."

All of the percolation by the cola and un-cola backers tended, not surprisingly, to overlook the sharp reduction of discarded litter that has occurred in areas with similar laws; also the concomitant help to the taxpayer's wallet.

Industries battling the ban include steel, aluminum and glass. The steel workers, glassmakers and Teamsters unions have also joined hands with management to deposit their opposition along with the bottlers, canners, brewers, soft drink manufacturers and retailers.

Several hundred Monroe County residents who signed petitions backing the bill last spring will be disappointed to learn of its untimely demise. But it may be unnecessary to grieve and hope only that the body may rest in peace.

Jumping into the breach on the local environmental scene is Dr. Larry Rymon and his Committee to Reduce Solid Waste. He and another member of the group will appear before the County Commissioners this morning with a proposal to place a question on the November ballot around Monroe County querying residents' attitudes towards the problem-creating throwaways.

And they will not be empty-handed, but will bring with them the signatures of several hundred Monroe Countians who would also like to return to those nostalgic days of yesteryear (less than 10 years ago) when the only containers available were returnables and no one seemed to think a thing about it.

The Committee To Reduce Solid Waste was not created on the spur of the moment. It has been organized for some months now and a great deal of solid information, planning and legwork has gone into its efforts.

Dr. Rynon also knows whereof he speaks. The East Stroudsburg State College biologist lived out in Oregon while engaged in research and helped to formulate that state's historic bill which their governor has called "enormously successful."

For those who signed petitions backing the Wood bill and those who didn't but are in agreement with the numerous reasons why there should be no throwaways, Rymon's efforts offer a glimmer of hope.

If you are supportive of his idea, make your feelings known and write to the Monroe County Commissioners. It is they who will determine whether or not the proposal reaches the November ballot where the people can make their own decision.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Bancroft

Susan Fetherman bride of navy officer

STROUDSBURG — Miss Susan Fetherman and Mark J. Bancroft were married at St. John's Lutheran Church, Stroudsburg, by Rev. William Leopold.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Helen Fetherman of East Stroudsburg and the late Alvin J. Fetherman. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bancroft Sr. of Princeton, N.J.

Given in marriage by her maternal grandfather, John Williams of West Palm Beach, Fla., the bride wore a floor length gown of white cotton eyelet with long sleeves and French cuffs. She wore a matching bow with daisies in her hair and an antique cameo brooch belonging to her great grandmother.

Mrs. Valerie Hochrine was matron of honor and Mrs. Linda Lesoine and Sonya Kling were attendants. They wore the same style dresses in a floral print and carried daisies with ivy and babies breath arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cunningham of East Stroudsburg.

Peter Hertzman of Trenton, N.J., was best man. Ushers were the bridegroom's brothers, Robert Jr. and Gregory Bancroft.

The bride's mother wore a long dress in black and white and the bridegroom's mother wore a matching dress and coat in aqua. Both had corsages of white carnations.

Miss Patricia Hall sang "One Hand, One Heart" and the theme from "Love Story". Miss Karen Lakey was organist.

A reception was held at the CLU Club in East Stroudsburg. A four-tiered cake decorated with real daisies was made by Mrs. Virginia Post.

The bride is a graduate of Stroudsburg High School and the Stroudsburg School of Cosmetology where she got her instructor's license. Mr. Bancroft is a petty officer in the U.S. Navy, stationed in Los Angeles, Calif.

They will be residing in Monterey Park, Calif.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

As a part-time farmer — well, would you like to see my two tomato plants, ten feet tall with the biggest tomato not much bigger around than a quarter to date — I'm keeping an interested eye on another garden not much bigger than mine.

It's at the corner of Eighth and Ann Sts. where two small patches of lawn used to border the front walk. One of the patches is filled with flowers, petunias mostly blooming their heads off.

The other patch is a miniature farm with tomato plants on which I jealously observed there is a glint of red showing through the lacy leaves, and rampaging vines showing trumpet-like flowers of orange which may turn out to be pumpkins and red which I can't guess what it will turn into.

But I have a feeling that both the blossoms on my tomatoes and the blossoms on his vines had better get a move on if they ever plan to amount to anything before frost.

The dark is beginning to close down ominously early these nights and despite the muggy heat, the katydids have been whooping it up with the boys for several weeks now — and when they started is supposed to be six weeks to frost.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — We mentioned the best of the season's hits on B'way a few columns ago with passing reference to a few fast folds at a million dollar loss apiece . . . Gower Champion, who has given up his own high stepping in favor of directing, tracked us down with his own prescription for the ailing theatrical scene . . . And it's not such a bitter pill.

"Broadway, the Fabulous Invalid, appears to be in its death throes," says Gower, "and everybody wants to know why and what somebody — anybody — is going to do about it. I don't pretend to know all the 'whys' despite having worked in and around the Broadway theater for years. I know some of them, of course, but all of them get as complex as the art form, the state of the U.S. economy and Big Business rolled into one industry can be. Silly putty! It bounces too many directions at once. What's to be done about it? I have some theories, some opinions and some things I'd like to try. But no all-encompassing, cancer-cure, bolt-of-lightning solutions. Nobody does.

"The present state of the Broadway theater can be summed up in one word. Tacky! And the musical theater is shamefully threadbare. Everybody knows that it costs too much money to mount a Broadway musical and that ticket prices are sky high. What most people don't know is that the increase in ticket prices hasn't begun to keep pace with the increase in the cost of a musical production — making it take longer and longer for the production to get into the black. It's tough for the producers and backers and few are willing to take a chance on anything but the most proven commercial talent available. Perhaps this nothing-ventured-no-new-talent-gained syndrome is one reason why the theater is languishing and why there is a growing rumble in the arts about the possibilities of some sort of government support.

"All the money in the world, however, can't shore up a crumbling theater when the key prop is missing. That prop is called writing invention! Writing invention is, in my opinion, the prime element missing in the theater today. The writing on Broadway had become unimaginative, stale and repetitive, and the most inspired interpretive talents alive can't quite rescue a show with a mediocre book.

"A great director can, however, make a huge difference in the quality of a show. Bob Fosse, the director of 'Pippin,' walked away with everything but the judges' shirts this year at the Tony awards. Here's a case where the brilliance of this once-in-a-lifetime director so overpowered the material as to make the disparity obvious.

"The basic form of the Broadway musical has been pretty much the same for the last 40 years and, I think, desperately needs innovation. New directions conceptually. Unless somebody gets some fresh ideas and brings the musical into the 70's (at least) the American musical comedy is going to end up a relic like the melodrama or Gilbert and Sullivan instead of the vital, peculiarly American art form it once was. I've been mulling some possible new concepts but I'm not sure I can verbalize them yet. In fact, I probably shouldn't verbalize them since things are so desperate at the moment that nobody's ideas are safe or sacred!

"Musical theater used to lead the musical thinking of America and reflected the era we were living in. With only a few exceptions Broadway producers have stayed with traditional musicals, something I find a pity. With the possible exception of 'Jesus Christ Superstar,' the flair, drive, excitement — the whole flavor of rock music — has yet to be transmitted to the stage. I would like to credit 'Hair' and 'Two Gentlemen of Verona' with being interesting but I have not really seen a treatment or usage that begins to approach what I would like today's music to be on the stage.

"What is a pity is to know that there are all those talented rock musicians out there writing music for every taste, with exciting rhythms, natural and affecting lyrics that put the June-moon school to shame — and nobody's encouraging them to write for the theater. O.K. folks. But the theater is losing the young and boring the mature audience to death with mediocrity!

"If a director can't have 'today' music to work with, at least he should have a book that brings the show into the 70's — something with good, solid dramatic content and reality. For these elements you must have great performers. When I directed 'I Do, I Do' on Broadway, those two consumate musical superstars, Mary Martin and Robert Preston made everything work, fantastically.

"Despite my tirade, I have no intention of deserting Broadway — it's my first love. It is difficult, however, to try to find some material that's interesting enough to leave California and put my head on the block again in New York. Even David Merrick, who has a long standing reputation for guts and drive and has gotten so many successes on stage, is moving into films."

JOHN MEYER
We didn't invent good taste.
We just never forgot it.

John Meyer didn't invent corduroy. He just handled it with imagination. That's why this fine-wale jacket has a soft, completely feminine look. Yoked front and back meticulously lined. Equally feminine, the pant with the wide waistband. In palomino blonde, racing red or Arabian black.
For the shirt, John Meyer suggests a matching cotton stripe.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) —A good day for dealing with superiors, with persons in authority generally. Any or all should be receptive to your ideas.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) —Your innate self—will and "bossiness" could be liabilities now. Many are oversensitive; will resent interference of any kind.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) —A more or less routine day, but some slightly unconventional and off-beat activities during the evening hours could be fun.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) —Your Venus continues to encourage artistic endeavors. A unique creative job should work out exceptionally well.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) —If you've had difficulty in launching a pet project because of opposition, you'll get a chance to prove a significant point shortly after noon.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) —Stimulating influences. An unexpected happening in the forenoon could lead to an unplanned — and profitable — trip.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) —Care needed in matters of communication. Misinterpretation of a letter or a message could lead to errors or misunderstandings.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) —Personal relationships under excellent influences. A good day for benefitting through friends and close associates.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) —Caution urged in financial matters. Pay no heed to reckless friends who urge you to spend foolishly.

YOU BORN TODAY are a vibrant and interesting individual, endowed with excellent gifts of leadership and organizational ability. Idealistic, enthusiastic and remarkably intuitive, you have the capacity to make friends in all walks of life — and keep them. You are versatile, too, and the fields in which you could succeed are almost limitless, but you could make your most outstanding mark in either the worlds of science or music. You have a strong sense of justice, and could make an estimable success of the law; could also excel in painting or photography. If business attracts you, the world of finance would be your best bet. Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 8-16

Opening lead — ace of diamonds.

There are some funny stories in the tournament bridge world. For example, take this hand where East, taking advantage of the vulnerability, opened three diamonds and South overcalled three spades.

West, a well-known expert, managed to restrain himself and pass, but when South bid four hearts over partner's three notrump, West could contain himself no longer and doubled — pianissimo.

Appreciating the danger of playing the hand with only four trumps, South ran to four spades, which West doubled accrescendo, appassionato, and fortissimo — and pretty loud at that.

West led the ace of diamonds, which South ruffed. A low club to the ace, snatching the king, was followed by another diamond ruff.

Declarer now decided, from both the vigor of the double and West's marked shortage in the minor suits, that West had all the missing trumps. Accordingly South put a plan into action to combat West's presumed five trumps.

He cashed the A-K-Q of hearts and, when East failed to ruff, South's suspicions were confirmed. He then ruffed the jack of hearts in dummy before trumping a third round of diamonds.

By now, eight tricks had been played and South had won them all. West still had his five trump winners while South had the K-J-8 of trumps and J-6 of clubs.

A club lead forced West to ruff and return a trump to the jack, and another club lead forced West to ruff and present declarer with a tenth trick in the form of the king of trumps. So South made four spades doubled!

East had very little to say about the result. In fact, he made only one criticism. He thought that West should have doubled, all right, but — diminuendo.

Much help available

Try now for school loans

By MORTON C. PAULSON
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

NEW YORK — If you plan to borrow money to finance college or vocational-school attendance this fall, the time to apply is now; processing may take 10 to 12 weeks.

You may be surprised at how much help is available. Ceilings on federally sponsored loans have been raised, and some eligibility criteria have liberalized.

But you also may need more financial assistance than you thought you would. Costs of higher education have risen sharply.

The U.S. Office of Education reports that the cost of tuition, housing, and food — but not personal expenses — at a private four-year college now averages $3,281 a year, up from $2,712 in the fall of 1970. At schools of the Ivy League variety, the bill may exceed $5,400. A year in law school could run $5,000 or more, and in medical school, $8,000.

If, however, you settle for a public four-year college in your home town or state, you may get by for about $2,100, including textbooks and all other expenses. That's the current average cost at such institutions, reports the College Scholarship Service of the College Entrance Examination Board.

See financial officer

The first person to see when you seek a loan is the financial officer of the school you hope to attend. He knows the details about the various programs, has the necessary application forms, and can tell you how to proceed.

More important, he's usually the one who determines eligibility for aid from programs requiring a showing of financial need. When an applicant is deemed eligible the finance officer recommends that he or she receive a loan in a specified amount, although sometimes the lender will lend more.

Before consulting the financial officer you should have a general idea of what types of aid are available. Here are the major categories:

Federally guaranteed loans. These loans are made by private lenders such as banks, credit unions, or the colleges themselves, but Uncle Sam pays the interest (seven per cent annually) and sometimes even guarantees repayment.

Up to $2,500 a year — an increase from $1,500 last year — can be requested in most states (terms of these loans vary a bit from state to state). Repayment usually must begin 9 to 12 months after the student leaves school, but it can be deferred for up to 3 years if the borrower is in the armed forces, the Peace Corps, or VISTA, or if he resumes full-time studies in an approved school.

The total amount of debt outstanding may not go above $7,500 for undergraduates or vocational-school students, or $10,000 for those in graduate school.

New changes coming

An important change was made this year in the rules for deciding who may receive the federal interest benefits. Heretofore these benefits went to students from families with an annual adjusted income of $15,000 or less; now the cost of attendance is weighed against a student's financial resources.

For example, if a student must have expensive equipment for a scientific or medical course, or if others in his family are attending college at the same time, he may qualify for the benefits even though the family's income exceeds $15,000 a year.

If you don't qualify you still may be able to get one of these loans, but you'll have to pay the interest yourself while in school.

Direct government loans. The federal government itself lends money to needy students. College financial-aid officers determine who should receive the assistance, set the amount, and disburse the funds. The maximum is $2,500 during the first two years, plus $2,500 for the last two years. Or, a student can get up to $5,000 during his junior and senior years if he did not borrow previously.

A student entering graduate school can borrow $5,000 or more if he borrowed less than the limit while an undergraduate, although the total may not exceed $10,000. No payments on the loan need be made until nine months after leaving school. The interest rate is three per cent. The obligation can be reduced if, after graduation, the borrower accepts employment in a designated economically depressed area, goes into certain kinds of teaching, or serves in specified military duty.

The basic educational opportunity grant program. Under this new program, needy high-school graduates planning to attend college full time can receive about $500 or $600 a year. However, a student can receive no more than half of his education costs in grants.

Bank loans. If you can't obtain any of the above, you may be able to borrow from a bank. These loans generally range up to $5,999 a year, with repayment usually starting 30 days after the loan is granted. Interest rates and other terms vary.

Deferred-tuition programs. A number of colleges offer plans under which selected students may repay part of their tuition after graduation. The repayment schedule geared to annual earnings.

Here's something that you should consider carefully before signing up for a loan: though borrowing for education may be wise, sooner or later, you'll be expected to start paying the money back. That day may come when you're just starting a career, when your income may be quite low. So don't borrow more than you have to.

And when inquiring about financial aid, ask about benefits available from sources such as the Veterans Administration, Social Security, and scholarships. You might qualify.

Flood benefits available

HARRISBURG — Special unemployment benefits — Disaster Unemployment Assistance (DUA) — are now available to persons unable to work because of recent heavy rains and flooding in 10 counties of the Commonwealth, State Secretary of Labor and Industry Paul J. Smith has announced.

In the federally funded DUA program, a weekly $66 will be paid to eligible Pennsylvanians, Smith said.

The counties classified as disaster areas by Presidential order and proclamation by Gov. Milton J. Shapp include Monroe, Northampton and Wayne.

Smith emphasized that persons unemployed as a result of the flooding should visit their nearest local Employment Service office to determine eligibility for DUA benefits.

"Gov. Shapp joins us in trying to extend all possible benefits to eligible Pennsylvanians who have been hit so hard by recent extremely heavy rains in certain areas of the Commonwealth — some of them sustaining more damage to their properties even than after Hurricane Agnes," Smith added.

Eligible Pennsylvanians have until Sept. 10 to file applications for DUA benefits.

Under DUA, the self-employed and several other categories of flood victims who would not be eligible for regular state unemployment compensation could receive these special weekly benefits.

Also, the program guarantees a minimum of $66 to those eligible for regular unemployment compensation, which ranges from a minimum of $12 to $91 a week, primarily depending upon their wages before becoming unemployed because of the flooding.

As an example, if a person out of work qualifies because of heavy rains for $45 in regular unemployment compensation, he would get an additional $21 to bring the total up to $66.

The DUA compensation is payable for a maximum of 30 weeks.

The DUA program covers persons who:

— Are unable to work because their place of employment was put out of operation by flood.

— Are self-employed but prevented from working by the effects of flood.

— Completed school or training 10 weeks prior to the disaster and can't find work because of flood.

'Ponding' latest flood problem

STROUDSBURG — A type of flooding affecting Monroe County not recognized in a recent state-wide Soil Conservation Service Survey is pending, according to District Conservationist Lowell Edminster.

While nearly all townships and boroughs have experienced flooding caused by stream or river overflow, ponding caused by poor drainage has often been overlooked, according to Edminster.

Ponding occurs on poorly drained soils with either a minimum slope or a barrier that impedes surface runoff.

In some areas ponding is the rule rather than the exception, says Edminster. While stream or river flooding can cause danger to life and property, people tend to overlook the consequences of poor drainage, he said.

Large pools of water can isolate homes from services when access becomes difficult or impossible. The pools can cause health hazards also, along with affecting basements of houses and causing malfunctioning septic systems.

State Conservationist Benny Martin said the soil service is studying flood conditions and mudslide areas throughout the state.

Thousands of communities across the state are being included in the study, according to Martin, with detailed maps and sources of flooding and slides plotted.

The flood hazard inventory will be used by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in carrying out the federal flood insurance program.

Flood prone communities are areas subject to flooding by a 100-year frequency storm. In other words, a community with a one per cent chance of flooding yearly.

S.S. benefit increase scheduled

STROUDSBURG — Persons receiving social security benefits will receive an increase in monthly payments of 5.9 per cent next June, according to Stroudsburg Social Security Manager Ray J. Little.

Little said the increase is a rise of .3 per cent over the initial projection.

It represents a hike in the consumer price index for June 1973 over the index's June 1972 figures.

The 5.6 per cent hike originally projected was only an estimate with the higher percentage calculated after exact consumer price index figures were gathered.

The increase will be noted in monthly social security checks to beneficiaries in June 1974, Little said.

Speech instructor named

EAST STROUDSBURG — Joyce L. Simpson, who served as an instructor of speech pathology and audiology at East Stroudsburg State College for one semester last year, will hold a similar position at ESSC during the coming academic year.

In this capacity, she will be working in the speech clinic located in LaRue Hall on the ESSC campus. She will admit patients, schedule them to therapy areas with speech correction personnel assignments and maintain records of both clients and the clinic.

She has done undergraduate work at Orange County Community College in New York and received a B.A. degree in English and speech from Morgan State College in Maryland.

She also holds a M.Ed. degree in speech pathology and audiology from the Pennsylvania State University.

State trooper discusses drugs at Kiwanis meeting

STROUDSBURG— A Pennsylvania state trooper voiced his disapproval Wednesday at the prospect of marijuana being made legal.

Trooper Alfred Drozdowski of the Stroudsburg barracks said, "I hope it's never legal because many users will turn to hard stuff."

Drozdowski, a criminal investigator, was the guest speaker at the Stroudsburg Kiwanis meeting held at the Penn Stroud Hilton Inn.

He spoke on his 11 years as a state trooper and the drug problem in the Monroe County area.

The trooper said, "Marijuana is still the biggest problem in this area because it can be grown."

Drozdowski said "other than marijuana, the county has no major drug problem."

He said he knows of no heroin arrests in the area but said eight former heroin users are on the local MHMR methadone program.

The state policeman was dismayed at the recent court decisions in Pennsylvania regarding marijuana arrests.

"With the recent court decisions, it's a headache to the police in terms of evidence."

He said prior to June, 1972, it was a felony with a five-year prison sentence if a person was convicted of possession of marijuana.

Now Drozdowski noted it is a summary offense with a maximum sentence of a 30-day jail term.

The Stroud Township resident doesn't believe tough sentences are a deterrent to drug sentences. He said many marijuana users try harder drugs like hashish and speed because they are associated with a drug-oriented group and desire a better "high."

Drozdowski discussed how marijuana is grown, the different forms in which it is sold, and also passed around to Kiwanians samples of marijuana, seeds and hashish.

For the Record

STROUDSBURG — Mrs. Lucille S. O'Neil, daughter of the late Dr. Joseph H. Shull, was incorrectly identified as a $1,000 donar to the Mediathon for the benefit of the General Hospital of Monroe County in Wednesday's Record.

Mrs. O'Neil donated the money in the memory of her late father who served as one of the first chiefs of staff at the General Hospital of Monroe County.

STROUDSBURG — Mrs. Frances Kopyless, who was reported by the state Bureau of Traffic Safety as having her driver's license suspended, says it's not true. She says she's been having a "battle" with the department's computer on the case and, in fact, had a renewed and valid license received within the past two weeks.

Striking haulers refuse temporary dump area

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Striking liquid waste haulers Wednesday rejected the opportunity to dump sewage on an emergency dumping ground in Coolbaugh Township.

By a 5-4 vote the nine septic and holding tank cleaners voted to continue their work stoppage at least until their next meeting later this week.

Hauler spokesman William Halterman said he had been notified haulers could dump sewage on a tract owned by Mt. Airy Lodge. He said a temporary permit for emergency dumping had been obtained by Herman Martens, co-owner, from the Department of Environmental Resources.

"We can start dumping tomorrow if we want to," Halterman told haulers. "But if we do, everything we ever went on strike for goes right down the drain. We will have lost everything we were after."

He charged haulers would be handcuffed by DER if they utilized the Coolbaugh Township site.

"They'll (DER) just say 'we found you a site now, our job is done' if we dump on that field," Halterman charged.

"They'll never find us any more sites," he warned.

Hauler Harold Smith said the site would be polluted within days if all nine individuals began dumping.

"Cripes, we'd overload the place so fast they wouldn't know what hit it," Smith alleged. "We just have to have sites with more size and spread out a little bit.

"If we don't go back to work soon, we're going to get burned-bad," one hauler said. He was referring to outside waste haulers coming in and pumping out septic tanks.

Hauler Bryden Newhart said he knew of an instance in Pocono Township where a Northampton County hauler emptied the septic tanks of a factory.

"Henry Yeske came in and pumped out the Palma Fashion factory in Tannersville," exclaimed Newhart.

"He'll regret it when I'm through with him. I'm going to have a warrant sworn out on him charging him with illegal soliciting within the township," Newhart angrily charged.

Plant manager Carmen Palma told The Record earlier this week his system was due for a semi-annual cleaning in September.

"We have 80 people working here and this means there will be 80 people out of work if we can't get this done," Palma said.

Halterman blasted DER for causing the problem, saying haulers should be allowed to dump on the sites they had been using before the strike until a number of approved dumping grounds are found by DER.

He said DER representatives from Harrisburg who were sent to Monroe County to help haulers gain quick approvals had not done their jobs.

"They checked one site, then said they had to go back to Harrisburg," Halterman said.

Whatever is happening, haulers say residents across the county are beginning to feel the pinch, as reports of septic tanks backing up into toilets begin to trickle in.

But haulers admit they also are feeling the effects of the strike. "I've got my kids eating one meal a day now," said hauler Willie Harper.

"But that's not going to make me back down. Until I can dump legally I'm not backing down."

Open space law session held by county's officials

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County Commissioners and planners met informally Wednesday to thrash over a draft copy of the open space taxation program being prepared by Cylinder and Brown, Doylestown consultants.

The firm is under a $6,000 contract to draw up a plan for implementing Act 515, Pennsylvania's open space assessment law.

The law allows for special taxation to property owners who agree to maintain their holdings in open space, reducing pressure for development. Several states use the open space assessment concept to retard development.

The following land in Monroe County would be eligible under the provisions of 515, according to the consultants:

— Farmland, including any tract of 20 acres used to raise livestock or grow crops.

— Forest land defined as at least 25 acres used for growing timber crops.

— Water supply land 10 acres in area described and certified by a professional engineer as naturally sloping more than 20 per cent or subject to flooding an average frequency of once every 100 years.

— Open space, meaning any tract with less than three per cent site coverage by roads and structures and which abuts parks, forest, gamelands, wildlife preserves or other natural reservations.

The nine-page draft plan includes other types of land which may qualify for open space assessments, but county officials indicated Wednesday the firm's initial submittal is lacking instructions for specific implementation of the program.

"It is just a copy of the act that we have here," said Douglas Williams, planning administrator. "We asked for instructions."

Marshall Reese, chairman of the county planning commission, said the major criticism of the law is its use by land speculators as a tax shelter.

"If the penalties were increased, that might minimize the chance someone will use this as a tax shelter," Reese said.

The law provides for collection of back taxes plus a five per cent penalty for breach of the covenant between property owners and county commissioners stipulating the land will be held in open space.

"I don't think this act is going to do what we want it to," said Williams. "It is just like a bank account. The amount of savings and the amount of penalties is not enough to make it do what you want."

The afternoon work session closed with a decision to call Cylinder and Brown to a meeting at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

County officials are working against the clock on the implementation of Act. 515. County Commission Chairman Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis said a public hearing on the open space program is targeted for the end of August.

She said work on the project should be in time to allow county residents to become informed before applying for open space assessments during the September appeals period.

Fair board to give $500

Reward set for vandals

West End Bureau

GILBERT — A $500 reward has been offered by the West End Fair Assn. for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the vandals responsible for causing damage to the West End Park and the fairgrounds.

The decision to post the reward was a unanimous one and came at the fair director's Tuesday meeting after members Elmer Kreger and Russell Scheller listed damages incurred at the park during the last two years.

Scheller said the Monroe County Park Commission had tried everything reasonable to stop the vandalism including lighting, fences and a regular security patrol, which is costing the county approximately $60 a week to maintain.

Scheller said there were only about three more weeks left when the park would be open, but agreed with Fair Association President Paul Everett, that damages could possibly continue even after the park officially closed.

Describing the vandals as becoming more brazen, Everett said the fairgrounds had sustained an increased number of damages during the past two years to toilets, a drinking fountain, and general grounds damage.

Fair Secretary Larry Krome said an attempt was made recently to break into the main fair office.

Scheller suggested that an around the clock watchman might be hired to patrol the park next year; the West End Fair directors seemed amenable to going along with such a proposal.

In the meantime, however, the directors decided to post the $500 reward in hopes that someone could provide information leading to the conviction of whomever is involved in the vandalism.

The association agreed that it would be responsible for posting the entire $500 for the reward, but it is expected that some funds for this effort will be coming from the county park commission.

Everett said the reward posters would be run off and posted at the fairgrounds as well as local businesses.

"It's a darn shame that somebody has to do this kind of thing," said Everett. "I don't know what they get out of destroying something. This park and pool was built for the kids. I can't understand why anybody would want to knock these things to pieces."

New York vacationer dies after being struck by auto

TANNERSVILLE — A New York City man on vacation in the Poconos was killed Tuesday night when he was struck by a car while walking on Rte. 611.

Jose G. Cortes, 39, Long Island City, N.Y., died in the operating room at the General Hospital of Monroe County at 11:25 p.m. Tuesday.

Death was attributed to multiple head injuries, according to Monroe County Coroner Daniel Warner.

Pocono Township police said Cortes was hit by a 1970 Plymouth station wagon operated by Vincent J. McHugh, 27, 201 Spring St., East Stroudsburg.

Police Chief Danny Harnden ruled death as accidential and McHugh was not charged.

Harnden said the victim and his wife, Iris, were walking south on Rte. 611 in front of London's Restaurant Equipment store at 9:15 p.m. when he was struck by the McHugh vehicle.

Police said the couple and their four children were on a vacation staying at Elmer's Motel and Cottages.

The couple had just purchased a pizza and were on their way back to the motel when the accident occurred.

McHugh told police he was driving south on Rte. 611 and spotted Cortes on the roadway. He veered to the left but was unable to avoid hitting him.

The force of the impact sent Cortes 45 feet up the road, according to Harnden.

The driver said he drove into the Gulf Station about 200 feet from the point of impact, and from his car, told the attendant to call an ambulance and police.

The police chief said, "There are no signs of the vehicle coming on the shoulder of the road."

Harnden said a 13-year-old girl saw the victim being thrown in the air and the car veering to the left. She told police she could not tell if Cortes was on the road or the shoulder.

Police also said Cortes was wearing a dark shirt and pants. Harnden estimated McHugh was traveling 40 miles per hour.

Rte. 402 residents burning over truck traffic proposal

Record County Bureau

MARSHALLS CREEK — Residents along Rte. 402 are up in arms over the Borough of Milford's demand that truck traffic be rerouted from Rte. 209 to Rte. 402 and are counteracting with a protest of their own.

A petition to Gov. Milton J. Shapp is circulating among residents riled by the suggestion that the truck traffic that now disturbs Milford should disturb them.

Petitioners will meet with Monroe County Commissioners today at 10:30 a.m.

Milford residents began circulating their petition to the governor Monday. It asks for trucks to use Rte. 402 and Interstate 84 exclusively.

Residents cite the road's inability to handle truck traffic because of its many steep hills and curves. They also fear for their children's safety; two busloads of schoolchildren travel the route daily.

"We don't have anything against Milford or truckers," said Mrs. Joyce Costanza of Marshalls Creek, who spearheaded the protest. "But the solution to the problem isn't Rte. 402."

Residents have already had a bitter taste of a rerouting of trucks on Rte. 402 — once when Rte. 209 was washed out and again when Interstate 84 work caused a redistribution of traffic.

"Almost all the accidents here are truck accidents," Mrs. Costanza complained. "They've hit the fire house, the bridge and the gift shop on the corner."

Residents also contend that Rte. 402 has traffic problems without the trucks.

"Traffic's backed up all the way from Marshalls Creek to White Heron Lake every weekend," Mrs. Costanza maintained.

Mrs. Carol Fox of Resica Falls knows of at least two instances when children were threatened by traffic on the road.

"My nephew was almost hit while crossing for the school bus," she said. "And a truck overturned next to a bus stop on Resica Hill, only five minutes after the kids had gotten off."

Mrs. Costanza, owner of Chateau Mont DeVille towne houses, said some of her tenants are talking about moving because of the trucks already on the road.

"We're planning on building more units too," she said. "This noise and pollution certainly won't help the housing shortage any."

There are presently four large developments along Rte. 402 who use the road for access to Stroudsburg: Castle Rock, White Heron Lake, Hemlock Farms and Cheteau Mont DeVille.

The population centers are centered in Monroe County. Pike County's section of the road is largely state-forested area with the exception of Hemlock Farms community.

New P.M. High School won't open on schedule

SWIFTWATER — The new Pocono Mountain High School construction project will not be finished in time for school's opening in the district Sept. 5, due to supply and equipment hold-ups caused by factory strikes.

District officials are finally saying publicly what everyone has known for the past few months, but the district is prepared to handle the crowded conditions until the new school is ready in late fall.

"Aug. 15 was to have been the occupation date, but we are still waiting for interior tile and other equipment," noted substitute superintendent James Davenport. "It's going to be a little crowded for the first couple of months, but we are prepared for everything that we can foresee and have definite, detailed plans to insure an orderly shift.

"The school board and administration is prepared for any eventuality," Davenport added. "We are organized to the extent that students will not even have to switch buses after they move to their new locations."

Essentially, the completion of the new school in late fall means a building shift for most students in the district from fifth grade up. The exceptions will be seventh and eighth graders.

Davenport said the district will start the year with 1,576 students in grades kindergarten through six in the four district elementary schools in Tannersville, Pocono Pines, Cresco and Tobyhanna.

A total of 1,524 students in grades seven through 12 will be packed into the existing high school to start the year.

When the big shift does occur, 526 fifth and sixth graders will move to the middle school to join 459 seventh and eighth graders who will have been there since the beginning of the year.

All students from ninth grade up will then move from the middle school building across the parking lot into the new high school.

After the shift, the district will then have 1,150 elementary students in grades kindergarten through four in four schools.

Marshall rape trial postponed

PHILADELPHIA — The trial of a former East Stroudsburg man charged with rape and five other crimes was postponed Wednesday until Aug. 27.

Craig Marshall, 24, 1531 S. Garnett St., Philadelphia, and formerly of 13 Taylor St., East Stroudsburg, is charged with raping a 41-year-old West Philadelphia nurse in her home April 24.

In addition to rape, he is charged with robbery, burglary, larceny, receiving stolen property and resisting arrest.

Marshall is lodged in the Philadelphia Detention Center in lieu of $3,500 bail.

He was paroled from the Dallas Correctional Institution April 9.

School board moves on electrical problem

STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg Area School Board moved Wednesday to solve the electrical problems at the district's new middle school on Chipperfield Drive.

First, it denied the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. right-of-way on school property to install an underground cable for electrical service.

Original plans had called for a cable to run under Chipperfield Drive to connect school lines with PP&L's outlet. However, PP&L then proposed running a new cable onto the new middle school site itself.

The power company initially estimated such a cable would cost the district $2,000. The contract engineer at the middle school, though, estimated the cost at almost $10,000.

The board then voted to reject PP&L's suggested plan.

Secondly, the board instructed its solicitor Samuel Newman to take measures insuring sufficient power and heat at the building site.

Electrical contractors at the school told the Stroudsburg School Authority Tuesday that the 220-volt power line specified in architect's plans for temporary light and heat is inadequate.

Project engineer Henry McMahon told the authority a step-up transformer would solve the problem.

Although solicitor Newman told the board the power company promised immediate service, the board asked that Newman make sure the company's promise was carried out.

Newman, the school's architect and representatives of the authority will meet Monday with PP&L to straighten out the electrical difficulties.

The board also recommended the authority accept the second low bid for carpeting in the school. The low bid of $122,000 was submitted by Mitchell Carpet and did not meet specifications. The bid recommended is for $133,000 from Bethlehem Floor Covering.

Chamber sets lunch meeting

STROUDSBURG — A full membership lunch of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce will be held Monday at 12:15 at the Penn Stroud Hilton. George Royle will discuss solid waste transfer stations.

A directors' meeting will start at 11 preceding the lunch.

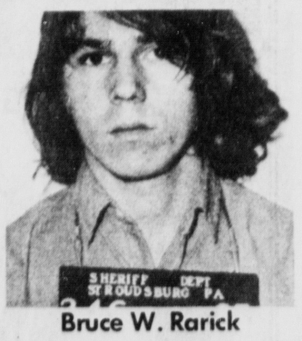
Prison escapee sought by police

CAMP HILL — State, county and local police are looking for a Stroudsburg man who escaped from a correctional institution for the third time Wednesday.

Bruce Wayne Rarick, 20, who formerly lived at 626 Main Street, escaped from the Camp Hill State Correctional Institution early Wednesday. He was serving a jail sentence for being an accessory after the fact, conspiracy, and two counts of prison breach (escape).

Rarick was described as being five feet five inches tall and weighing 125 pounds.

Rarick was picked up in East Stroudsburg in November, 1972 after an escape from a correctional institution.



Bruce W. Rarick

His capture followed a high speed chase through the residential areas of East Stroudsburg by borough police. He and two other companions, who were also escapees, were caught after the stolen car they were riding in overturned on Rte. 447 outside of the borough.

None hurt in crash

MARSHALLS CREEK — No one was injured when a car traveling south on Rte. 209 skidded into a trailer being towed by a car during a driving rainstorm three miles north of here late Wednesday afternoon.

Richard K. Piper, of Sacramento, Calif., was stopped on the highway when an auto driven by Carol Robatzek, of Pittsburgh skidded into the trailer Piper was towing behind his station wagon.

Giants reach into past for victory

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants, who call themselves a team of the future, borrowed a page from the past to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 11-2 Wednesday.

Willie McCovey, 35, hammered a three-run homer in the first inning and that was all 34-year-old Juan Marichal needed to win his 10th game of the season.

"It makes it much easier to pitch with a lead," Marichal said.

Marichal now has 237 career victories, tops among active pitchers and three more than Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals, who ranks second.

"I don't care about that," Marichal said of his lead. "If I win more than Gibson that's good. If I don't, that's still all right. Besides, he is injured and can't pitch."

Marichal used a side-arm delivery to subdue all the Phillies except Bob Boone. Boone had a double and homer and scored both Philadelphia runs.

"I usually have trouble with the Phillies," Marichal said. "Luzinski had a homer in every game I pitched against Philadelphia." Marichal held Greg Luzinski hitless Wednesday.

McCovey, who is being given days off to rest by Manager Charlie Fox, homered off loser Wayne Twitchell, 11-5, following a single by Garry Maddox and a hit batsman. The homer was his 21st of the season.

"McCovey can help us the most if he gets days off. I ask him every day how he feels. Sometimes, after night games, he's stiff. This time he wasn't," Fox said.

Fox and McCovey had a disagreement earlier in the season about when the first baseman would play. Now they are communicating.

Bobby Bonds scored three runs for the Giants to give him 102 for the season.

"That was one of my goals," Bonds said. "Now I would like to drive in 100 runs." He had 80 rbi's going into today's final game of the series with the Phillies.

Angels' pinch-hitter nothing special

NEW YORK (UPI) — Winston Llenas seemed embarrassed when he found himself surrounded by the flower of the New York communications media Wednesday after driving in the winning run in the California Angels' 3-1 victory over the Yankees.

Llenas' tie-breaking eighth-inning single was his 13th pinch-hit of the season and presented Steve Barber, now 17-11 lifetime against the Yankees, with his second victory of the season. Sandy Alomar followed Llenas' tie-breaker with another run-scoring single to nail down the win.

"I don't want to sound pretentious," said Llenas, who looks more like a high school boy than a major league baseball player. "I don't feel I'm doing anything special although pinch-hitting is tougher than hitting when you're in the game.

"It is a challenge but nothing special," he went on in answer to a question. "It's a challenge every time you put on the uniform. I'm an early swinger —I like that first pitch because it's over the plate so often. Concentration has a lot to do with it. You have to keep watching the game even though you're not in it.

"Sure, I'd like to play regularly," he said. "But when you contribute in any way, it makes you feel good."

The Angels' two eighth-inning runs were unearned because of a throwing error by third baseman Graig Nettles, who is known in some New York circles as E-5. It paved the way for Mel Stottlemyre's 11th loss against 12 victories but the Yankee ace really didn't have much to complain about. He was pushing the ball much of the time and was lucky that he went into the Angels' eighth with a 1-1 tie.

Barber went 7 1-3 innings for the Angels with Monty Monteagudo pitching the last 1 2-3 innings to receive credit for his second save.

STROUDSBURG — Top-seeded Chuck Ackerman and Bill Robinson gained the final of the Monroe County Men's Doubles Tennis Tournament Wednesday with a 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 win over Sherwood Samet and Lance Beshore.

Fourth-seeded Joe Villiano and Ed McQuillin beat Bob Jacobs and Al McCormick, 6-2, 6-1. Villiano and McQuillin will meet George Garland and Thad Laskowski tonight.

Walther discharged

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — David "Salt" Walther, severely burned in a fiery crash during the Indianapolis 500-mile race, was discharged Wednesday from the University of Michigan Hospital in "good" condition.

Perez key in Reds' victory

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Hot-hitting Tony Perez' ninth inning single snapped a scoreless deadlock Wednesday night and gave the streaking Cincinnati Reds a 1-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates behind Jack Billingham's six-hit pitching.

It was Cincinnati's seventh win in their last eight games and 35th out of 46 dating back to July 1.

Joe Morgan opened the ninth with a single off losing pitcher Dock Ellis, 11-11, and stole second, his 50th steal of the season to lead the majors. Dan Driessen was intentionally walked and Perez then stroked the deciding single to center, scoring Morgan.

Perez has knocked in runs in seven consecutive games and has 17 RBI's in 14 games this month with a 12-game hitting streak.

It was Billingham's 16th victory against eight losses and the first time he has won since July 27th.

Phillies obtain new infielder

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The Philadelphia Phillies, trying to come up with the right combination to make a run for the National League's Eastern Division pennant, picked up an infielder Wednesday.

The Phils, who dropped a lopsided 11-2 decision to San Francisco in an afternoon game, obtained Billy Grabarkewitz from the California Angels for a player to be named later.

Grabarkewitz, who has been used infrequently by the Angels this season and is batting only .163, will report to the Phillies in time for this afternoon's game in San Francisco.

The Angels got him last winter from Los Angeles, where he had played four seasons with a .246 batting average.

In another trade announced in conjunction with the major league meetings, the Chicago White Sox acquired veteran lefthander Jim Kaat from the Minnesota Twins on waivers.

Kaat, 34, whose best season came in 1966 when he had a 25-13 record and a 2.74 earned run average, had an 11-12 mark and a 4.40 ERA this year. He lost eight of his last 11 decisions and was knocked out in the second inning in his last start Sunday.

With the White Sox Kaat will be reunited with pitching coach Johnny Sain, who was with Minnesota when Kaat had his best seasons, 1965 and 1966. In 1965 Kaat was 18-11 with a 2.83 ERA. Kaat's lifetime record is 190-159.

Rosburg suspended by PGA

NEW YORK (UPI) — The PGA Tournament Players Division (TPD) Wednesday suspended former PGA champion Bob Rosburg for three tournaments over his allegations that Billy Casper had cheated when he won the Western Open at Chicago last month.

Joe Dey, commissioner of the TPD, said Rosburg had accused Casper, sometime after the end of the tournament, of illegally moving a divot near where his ball had landed.

Casper said he had no recollection of the incident, but he did say he had a shot land near a divot which had been replaced. He said he played the shot without moving anything.

"I've won 50 tournaments," Casper said. "I should know the rules."

Larry Hinson, who was scoring for Casper and finished second, a stroke behind, at Chicago, asked a PGA official at a subsequent tournament if it would be a violation to move a divot in that circumstance. The official told him it would be.

When Rosburg learned of the discussion, Dey said, he made his complaint.

"The remarks raised a question as to the integrity of Billy Casper," Dey said. "The reported violation was not proved."

Israelis, South Koreans subjects

University Games open on discord

MOSCOW (UPI) — Booing of the Israeli delegation and indifference toward the South Koreans by a crowd of nearly 90,000 marked the gala 61-nation-by-nation parade of colors today at the official opening of the seventh World University Games.

Although they have no diplomatic representation here, both the Israelis and South Koreans sent delegations to the Games which the host Soviets hope will seal their bid for the 1980 Olympics.

The 32-member Israeli delegation was greeted with a loud chorus of whistles and boos from the hugh crowd at the rain-soaked Lenin Stadium while the 34-member South Korean contingent received no noticeable reaction. North Korea is boycotting the Games because of the South Korean participation.

More than 800 marchers carrying multi-colored banners bearing the University Games emblem opened the one-hour and 50-minute ceremony. It culminated with a lighting of the traditional torch by Ludmila Zharkova of the USSR and a colorful fireworks display.

Rain which has fallen intermittently for the past five days held off until nearly the end and began during the fireworks. The delegations had to sidestep numerous puddles on the infield sod.

The flag bearers were followed by Soviet military bands, motorcyclists accompanied by performing gymnasts, and dancers in peasant costume. Australia led the parade of nations.

The U.S. delegation, the largest of the Games with nearly 300 athletes, was greeted with a loud burst of applause as members filed out in their white slacks and blue blazers. Cathy Carr, 18, a two-time gold medal winner in the Olympic swimming competition at Munich last summer, carried the U.S. flag.

High above in the center section of the stadium, a contingent of Soviets flashed placards bearing the University Games symbol.

The 124-man Russian contingent concluded the march of nations.

Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Communist Party general secretary who was in route to central Asia, sent a message of greeting, praising the Games as serving a "noble goal of expanding international sports relations."

The real brunt of activity will begin today with basketball.

Decathlon hope criticizes Russians

MOSCOW (UPI) — Fred Samara, the best U.S. hope in a star-studded decathlon field at the World University Games, today criticized Soviet officials for kicking the Americans off the Lenin Stadium track for the second straight day of workouts there.

Samara, 23, a senior at the University of Pennsylvania, said the U.S. track men had their workouts cut short by Soviet officials so that the stadium could be utilized for opening ceremony rehearsals.

"We had planned to train at least two hours a day both Tuesday and Wednesday," Samara said. " But so far the most time they have given us is 45 minutes. Meanwhile, after kicking us off, they went ahead and let the athletes from some of the Communist countries work out."

Asked if any of the U.S. track men questioned the Soviet action, Samara replied: "Sure, but they just shook their heads and mumbled, 'not understand.'"

Despite the harassment from the stadium officials, Samara called the decathlon field " the best ever assembled and it should be a tremendous competition."

Besides Samara, the field includes the seven top decathlon men in the world, including Nicolai Avilov of the Soviet Union, the world record holder for the event.

Samara, a native of New York City, was injured at last year's Olympic trials and did not make the trip to Munich although he has considered one of America's brighest hopes in the grueling 10-event decathlon. So far, his best point total has been 7,777-quite a bit shy of Avilov's world record of 8,454.

"The competition here alone makes me feel that I can hit 8,000," he said. "Of course, it hasn't been easy training—as you can probably imagine.

"For the first two days, we didn't even know the Lenin Stadium was available to us. So instead, we worked out at a tiny little track across from the University compound. It was so hard, it felt like Route 80."

Record holder at Pocono to return for modifieds

LONG POND — Geoff Bodine, the three-quarter mile track record holder at Pocono International Raceway, is to return Aug. 25 and Aug. 26 for the Coke 250 modified stock car championship.

The Chemung, N. Y. driver has been a steady competitor at Pocono since the first modified race in 1969. He finished third in the first race, two laps off the pace.

Bodine's best Pocono finish was second in the 1970 race. He entered the 1971 Pennsylvania 500 for late model stock cars. After finishing back in the pack in 1971 and 1972, he set the track record of 99.820 miles per hour in qualifications for last year's race.

Bodine won the 1971 Trenton 200 and the 1972 Trenton Race of Champions. Despite his recent success, Bodine has been racing modifieds for only five years.

Bodine, 24, attended Corning Community College. He started racing by driving micro midgets in Chemung. His first modified race was at Fulton, N. Y.

Three more winners of qualifying races at other regional tracks have been announced as guaranteed starters for the two-day event. They are: Dick Flag, Holland (N.Y.) Speedway; Stroker McGurk, Perry (N.Y.) Speedway; and Maynard Troyer, Spencer Speedway, Williamson, N.Y.

Aug. 25 will be devoted to practice and qualifications. Sunday's schedule will include two hours of time trials, a 20-lap consolation race and the 250-lap (187.5 mile) race.

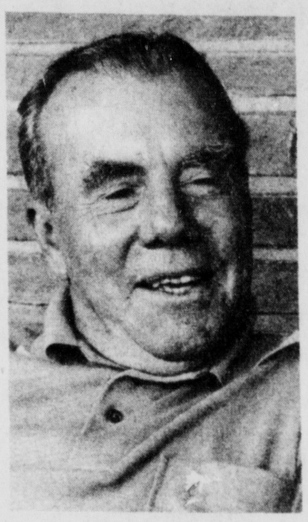
Ruth 'greatest ever,' Stroudsburg man recalls

By CHUCK FIERSON
Record Sports Editor

STROUDSBURG — Ray Welsh has seen them all. He still speaks of Pie Traynor and Walter Johnson and Honus Wagner. In the same breath he talks of Pete Rose and Joe Morgan and Roberto Clemente.

But as far as Ray Welsh is concerned, Babe Ruth was the "most popular and greatest home run hitter I ever saw."

Welsh, who lives at 1057 Fritz Ave., Stroudsburg, has been a baseball fan from his boyhood days in Western Pennsylvania. But he can speak of the Ruths and the Henry Aarons and all the rest with a little more authority than most.



From 1946 to 1951 he was associated with the old Brooklyn Dodgers. He was in charge of the tryout camps which were scattered all around the country. After leaving the Dodgers he hooked up with the Pittsburgh Pirates, for whom he worked for 10 years.

It was really no coincidence that he went with Pittsburgh. Branch Rickey, whom Welsh said "seemed to like me," went from Brooklyn to Pittsburgh about the same time.

After dropping out of baseball for several years Welsh, who still wears the 1949 World Series ring of the Dodgers, joined the Cincinnati organization, for whom he still works as a running instructor.

Welsh, who is an extremely youthful looking 69, said he saw the legendary Ruth, who died 25 years ago today, play only twice. But it was enough to leave a lasting impression.

"We lived in Western Pennsylvania," the former East Stroudsburg State College basketball coach recalled. "Our chances to see Ruth play were very slim compared to somebody from this area.

"But I did see him play in Washington against the Senators in 1927 or 1928. What a man he was. I also saw him when I was a kid. My father took me to Pittsburgh on the train and we saw him in Forbes Field.

"When I saw Ruth play everybody was crazy about him. There was no comparison to him as far as another player except perhaps Lou Gehrig. The thing that amazed me most about Ruth was his size, strength and confidence when he got hold of a bat. He just seemed to walk into the ball."

There are hundreds of stories about Ruth, but Welsh tells of one related to him.

"One of the scouts told me about Ruth hitting a ball to rightfield. It was hit so hard it tore the glove off the rightfielder, broke his sunglasses and hit him on the forehead and knocked him out cold."

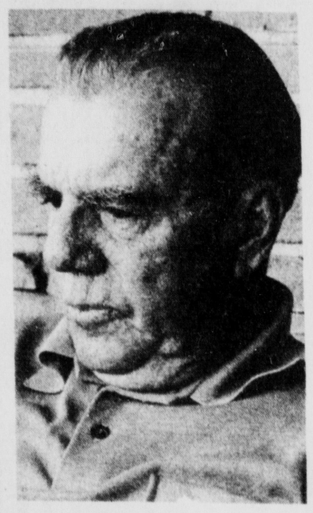
For nearly 30 years Welsh has been around hitters — guys like Ted Williams and Stan Musial and Mickey Mantle.

"But I just can't compare anybody to Ruth as far as hitting. There was just one Babe Ruth."

Welsh talks about Williams and Musial and Mantle as being "natural hitters" who "studied the art."

"Ted Williams was a great hitter," Welsh recalls. "I loved to see him hit. But he was not a better natural hitter than Ruth. He just studied it more. To him it was a science.

"Ruth was just a natural born hitter. He would not have been any better if he studied it or had instruction.



When ever Ruth took a cut at the ball it was just so smooth and easy. It just sort of glided out of the park.

"Ruth never showed overexaggeration or strain while hitting a ball. He just had great natural ability."

Although Welsh does not say today's players have it "soft," he says hitting home runs in Ruth's day was much harder.

"Today they have such outstanding equipment compared to what they had before. And remember back then they had the spitball and the forkball. And they loaded the ball up with anything they could find — alum, tobacco juice, anything."

Probably the thing for Ruth which is most noted is his home run hitting ability. Atlanta's Henry Aaron is closing in on the major league record 714 by Ruth.

But Welsh puts it simply.

"I just can't compare Aaron to Ruth. That's my opinion of Ruth. Henry Aaron is a great player. But so was Ruth. If he breaks the record, that's perfectly all right. Records are made to be broken.

"There are some similarities between the two. After 13 years in baseball Aaron still stole 20 bases. But people tend to forget Ruth was a pretty good base runner, too. People don't give him credit for that."

There's little doubt that Aaron will break the home run record. Whether it will come this season or next remains to be seen.

But as far as Ray Welsh is concerned, there is still only one Babe Ruth.

"The thing with each new generation," Welsh says as he looks back, "is that there is always an outstanding athlete who will become a very popular man. In my day it was Babe Ruth."

Legend remains 25 years after his death

By FRED DOWN

NEW YORK (UPI)— Legends die hard and the legend of Babe Ruth will live on even after Hank Aaron becomes baseball's new all-time home run king.

It must be difficult for current fans to understand why Ruth, who died 25 years ago today, will remain the all-time home run king in the minds of millions of Americans after Aaron surpasses his greatest record. Some of them are undoubtedly racists and others are professional old-timers who yearn for "the good old days of their youth."

But many others are average people who were awed by the sight of Ruthian majesty and have never been as emotionally affected by Aaron or any other athlete. Some of these aren't even baseball fans. They may be housewives who heard their husbands talk about Ruth and then saw him in a game or a railroad station and remember it as a shining moment when they saw a special kind of greatness.

Those who will continue to regard Ruth as the all-time home run king can support their belief by showing the Babe averaged 8.5 homers for every 100 at-bats while Aaron has averaged 5.7 for every 100 at-bats. They can also point that Ruth often hit more homers in a season than any team in baseball...that as late as 1927 he was hitting 14 per cent of all the homers hit by American League players...and that from 1920 through 1933 he hit a total of 637 homers or an average of 45.5 per season.

Such figures form the basis of the "case for the Babe" but statisticians don't create legends. Not like this one, anyway.

Ruth was a man who lived the American dream beginning with his youth which was spent in St. Mary's orphanage in Baltimore, Md. He joined the Boston Red Sox in 1914, the year World War I started, and was acquired by the New York Yankees in 1920, the year after the Black Sox World Series scandal. The latter date is pivotal. Baseball's honor lay in the gutter as a result of the scandal and the Babe reached down with his 52-ounce bat and lifted it to the status of the national pastime.

This Ruth was not the overblown Ruth of 1930 with his 250-pound Santa Claus-like body supported by spindly legs. This was a lean and hard, 6-foot, 3-inch, 215-pound super athlete. These were the Roaring Twenties in the United States which had turned its thoughts to fun after having taken part in the "war to end wars."

It was an era of wonderful nonsense and Ruth strode through it like Everyman turned loose in the Garden of Fun. He was big and coarse...tramping through life with a reckless abandon...eating, drinking and brawling with astonishing appetite. His Ruthinian power literally saved and transformed the game. Baseball was a game of pitching, stolen bases, bunts and hit-and-run plays before he appeared on the scene. He gave the game its new dimension of power—its essential element of excitement.

The United States was enjoying life on a scale the world may never have seen before and no one was enjoying it more than Ruth.

Frank Graham, who traveled with Ruth as a sports writer for the New York Sun, described the Ruth of that era as follows:

"He was a very simple man, in some ways a primitive man. He had little education and little need for what he had. For it was as if his life had been ordered for him, so that he did not have to turn a page in a book or do sums in arithmetic to gain the knowledge he needed to become rich and famous.

"He traveled the world over, yet when his travels were done he could tell you nothing about the places he had been save the places where he had had fun. He literally walked with kings, yet he couldn't remember their names. He couldn't even tell you the names of all his teammates, although he had names of his own for them such as Chicken Neck, Flop Ears, Duck Eye, Horse Nose and Rubber Belly.

"His appetites were prodigious and as long as he was in robust health—and he was for almost all of his life—he made no effort to restrain them. The jug and the platter were as much a part of his existence as the bat and the ball. He had a fondness for automobiles which he drove at such terrific speeds as to wear them out or, in reckless moments, wrap them around telegraph poles.

"He was warm-hearted, fabulously generous, genuinely fond of children, greatly moved by the ills and trials of others, devoted to his family and his friends—and would not have known how to deal with an enemy for the simple reason that he never had one."

Across the street from Yankee Stadium posters of Babe Ruth are still on sale 25 years after his death. Displayed next to him is one of Hank Aaron. (UPI Wirephoto)

This was the Ruth my father took me to see when I was nine years old. My father was a Giant fan, who hated the Yankees and believed John McGraw was the greatest man in baseball history but he announced one day in 1934 that we were going to Yankee Stadium.

"I've never gone there before," he said. "But I want my son to be able to say he saw Babe Ruth play."

That son has only the vaguest recollection of seeing Ruth play in 1934 but in 1947, as a young sports writer, he saw him again. The occasion was one of the earliest of the Old-Timers Day promotions, the Yankees having asked a batch of the famous old heroes to take a bow. Ruth, of course, was the big attraction and I was in the Yankee clubhouse along with the players and other writers when the word came that Ruth had reached the stadium.

We had been sitting around talking about Ruth and the old days...arguing whether, in fact, Ty Cobb or Honus Wagner or Wee Willie Keeler was a greater player...remembering his exploits... in short, talking baseball.

And then, suddenly, the door to the clubhouse flew open and there he was.

Every man in the room rose to his feet as Ruth stood in the doorway, thinner and paler than anyone had expected, but still an imposing figure. He hesitated a moment and then strode down the center of the clubhouse and with a wave of his arm called out, "Hiya kids." I never again had to ask whether he was, in fact, the best of them all.

And yet a teammate like Harry Hooper, who played in the American League from 1909 through 1925, admits it all seemed unbelieveable.

"You know, I saw it all happen from beginning to end but sometimes I still can't believe what I saw," Hooper said many years later. "This 19-year old kid, crude, poorly educated, only lightly touched by the social veneer we call civilization, gradually transformed into the idol of American youth and the symbol of baseball the world over—a man loved by more people and with an intensity of feeling that perhaps has never been equaled before or since.

"I saw a man transformed from a human being into something pretty close to a god," Hooper continued. "If somebody had predicted that on the Red Sox in 1914, he would have been thrown into a lunatic asylum."

Ruth was an outstanding pitcher who had successive 18-8, 23-12 and 24-13 records from 1915 through 1917. He hit a total of nine homers in 351 at bats during those three seasons and in 1918 was used as a pitcher, first baseman and outfielder. He had a 13-7 record as a pitcher and tied for the league lead with 11 homers. He appeared in 130 games, but only 17 as a pitcher in 1919, and set a new major league record of 29 homers in one season.

At this point, Yankee clubowner Jacob Ruppert learned that Harry Frazee, who owned the Red Sox, was short of money. Ruppert offered Frazee $125,000 and Ruth became a Yankee. The man and the hour were at hand.

From 1920 through 1933, Ruth's season home run totals were 54, 59, 35, 41, 46, 25, 47, 60, 54, 46, 49, 46, 41 and 34. The figures are impressive enough today but in that era were awesome. He hit balls farther and higher than anyone dreamed possible. He hit more home runs than teams did. He made the fans forget the Black Sox. Yankee Stadium was constructed and called the House that Ruth Built. He founded the Yankee dynasty that lasted 43 years until 1964. He combined power and consistency at the plate so that his lifetime average was .342. He called a home run in a World Series game. His once lean and arrogant face of youth became the jolly round face of an American folk hero. Years later, Japanese soldiers charging U.S. positions in the Southwest Pacific during World War II would cry out, "The hell with Babe Ruth."

The Yankees brought him back to a couple of old-timers games but he never filled Yankee Stadium in his life as he did in death. He died on a steaming hot August 16, 1948 and there was, of course, only one place in New York big enough to hold the wake: Yankee Stadium.

They came—the people he had thrilled and awed—in long lines for three days and nights to pay their final respects, filing slowly past the bier in the rotunda of the huge stadium. He was buried from St. Patrick's Cathedral where Francis Cardinal Spellman delivered the eulogy.

As his former teammates, acting as pall bearers, carried the coffin down the center aisle of the cathedral, Joe Dugan turned to Waite Hoyt, wiped the sweat from his forehead with a handkerchief and said, "Boy, could I use a beer about now."

"So could the Babe," said Hoyt.

The Babe would have loved that one.

Kuhn strikes out on interleague play

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Deeply distressed by the deadlock which has grown and hardened, baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn made a personal pitch for inter-league play but struck out swinging, United Press International learned Wednesday.

Kuhn's failure to persuade the National League to consider regular competion with the American League on even a limited basis next year amounted to an out-and-out slap down for him.

Kuhn's action was strictly voluntary.

He felt the fans' interest in baseball would be stimulated by the American League proposal to play for at least four or six games with the National League next year and he expressed his views, passionately at times, in a private meeting with the Baseball Executive Council made up of Walter O'Malley of the Dodgers, John McHale of the Expos, Bob Reynolds of the Angels, Calvin Griffith of the Twins and the two league presidents, Joe Cronin of the American and Chub Feeney of the National.

Also present were Allan "Bud" Selig of the Brewers and Frank Dale of the Reds, both of whom are members of a special committee that had studied the feasibility of inter-league play in the past six months along with Cronin and Feeney.

"He tried hard," one National Leaguer said on Kuhn's effort, "but he was shot down. I was shocked by the solidarity of opinion against inter-league play in our league. If the expression wasn't unanimous it certainly was mightly close to it."

Publicly most National Leaguers didn't want to be quoted on the subject but a few, such as Chicago Cub owner Phil Wrigley, were willing to speak for the record.

"Primarily, we're opposed to inter-league play," he said. "I hope we can work something out but I'm not at all certain we can."

Another National League magnate had this to say about the deteriorating situation here:

"You can't blame the people in our league for the way they feel about this thing. Take one of the expansion clubs for example. San Diego, say. They paid $10 million to play National League teams. They can stand up and say, 'we have a membership agreement to play National League teams so why should we voluntarily go out and play American League teams.'"

Selig is the leading advocate of inter-league play.

He spent six months getting together a comprehensive report on the subject, and when he began to get wind of the National league's stubborn resistance to expand for limited inter-league play next year he said, somewhat ruefully:

"I simply can't understand how six months work can go down the drain like this."

Officially the American League still hasn't been notified how the National League feels about inter-league play.

Most of the communication between officials of the two leagues has been done privately. This is the way baseball people customarily conduct their meetings.

Generally when they do have an actual meeting, they come out and say, "we have nothing to announce."

Under the rules of baseball, with both leagues deadlocked the way they are now, Kuhn has the authority to cast a deciding vote. The rules say he has.

Questioned as to how he would vote, the commissioner said "it was premature" for him to say one way or another. He did say, however, he had not been asked to vote yet.

Kuhn has been asked to vote when the two leagues were at an impasse before.

He may be asked to do so now again by the American League which has been pushing inter-league play all along.

"Maybe that's what we're waiting for," said one official. "Maybe we want to see the commissioner stand up and insist on voting on this issue. Of course, even if he does, some of us still feel the commissioner isn't God."

What would happen if say, the commissioner's vote was not accepted by neither one league or the other?

"In that case," said the offical, "the whole thing could wind up in court."

Atlanta belts Cubs for 10th loss in row

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Atlanta Braves belted 19 hits, including home runs by Darrell Evans and Dave Johnson Wednesday to annihilate the Chicago Cubs 15-1, lengthening the Cubs' losing streak to 10 games. It was Chicago's 13th defeat in its last 14 games.

Every Braves starter had at least one hit, all but winning pitcher Phil Niekro scored at least once and all but shortstop Marty Perez had at least one run batted in.

Evans hit his 34th homer of the season with Mike Lum on base in the first inning and Johnson hit his 32nd with Hank Aaron on base in the sixth.

Ralph Garr had four singles in six at-bats and drove in three runs while Evans added a single to his homer and also drove in three runs.

Starter Rick Reuschel of the Cubs, taking his 11th loss against 12 wins, allowed nine hits and eight runs in 2 1-3 innings.

Niekro went the distance for the Braves, giving up seven hits for his 13th victory against five losses. Chicago's only run came on a fourth inning single by Rico Carty, acquired from Texas, and Ron Santo's first triple of the year.

Trading remains low

Market rallies to gain

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sustained dollar strength on overseas exchanges pushed stocks a bit higher Wednesday, but trading remained cautious on the New York Stock Exchange.

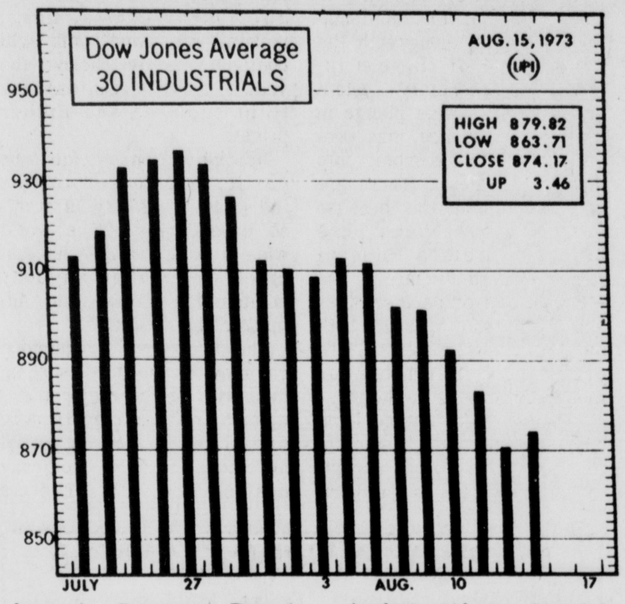
The Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.46 to 874.17. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index was up 0.30 to 103.01. The average price of a NYSE common share gained 12 cents.

Buying was highly selective, with advances topping declines, 731 to 619, among 1,737 issues traded.

Turnover totaled 12,040,000 shares, compared with 11,740,000 Tuesday.

Investors went bargain-hunting following more than two weeks of steady losses in which the Dow lost over 60 points. A rally by the dollar abroad, which closed at a six-month high in London, aided the list much of the day.

Buying picked up a bit in the last half-hour, following word from the Commerce Department the United States showed its first balance of payments surplus since 1969 in the June quarter.



Analysts said many investors remained on the sidelines, holding back on investment decisions for President Nixon's Watergate message scheduled Wednesday night. Wall Street also is considering the continuing problems of inflation under Phase IV guidelines, and skyrocketing interest rates.

William Nelson of Moody's Investors Service commented, "Phase IV has added a new set of uncertainties. The guidelines could hurt corporate earnings, depending on how tough the fellows in Washington get."

Saxon Industries, which reported lower earnings Tuesday, led the actives, falling 3/8 to 4 7/8 on 203,700 shares. Browning-Ferris Industries (special offering) was second, off 1½ to 15⅞ on 181,400 shares. Teleprompter followed, off ½ at 12⅛ on 169,700 shares.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange moved irregularly lower in sluggish trading. The Amex index was unchanged at 22.97, with declines a shade ahead of advances. Volume totaled 1,570,000 shares, compared with 2,000,000 traded Tuesday.

Phase IV — curtain goes up on unhappy production

By JAMES P. GANNON
Dow Jones - Ottaway News

WASHINGTON — As the curtain goes up on Phase IV, the stage is set for an unhappy production: A rewritten play opening before a weary audience, authored by White House scriptwriters who don't like the plot and backed by a producer who hopes it closes after a short run.

Whether this seems comic or tragic, it fairly well depicts the mood backstage as the Nixon Administration introduces yet another phase of its two - year - old program of wage and price controls. In contrast to the optimistic openings for earlier phases, Phase IV begins amid a somber governmental mood, with Administration officials stressing the limited value of controls rather than promising much success against inflation.

"We're not trying to kid anyone," confides a top official of the Cost of Living Council who believes the present price spiral is caused by world - wide inflationary forces beyond the control of any wage - price restraints.

The collapse of the Phase III program, the problems of the just - ended price freeze and other setbacks have soured the atmosphere.

There's no joy in Phase IV because Administration economic aides basically don't like what they're doing. Somewhat to their own surprise, these advocates of the free market find themselves beginning a third year of controls with a retreaded Phase II system that they fear doesn't fit an overheated economy. Almost nobody high in the Administration thinks this is a really good idea, including Nixon, who hopes to scrap the controls by year's end.

There are many reasons officials are skeptical about Phase IV. Talks with top economic advisers, controls - program administrators and others indicate these are the most important:

Food price increases and shortages, the most explosive political threat to Phase IV, are certain to continue for months. Even this fall's expected bumper crops no longer seem likely to stabilize the chaotic food situation. —Fears of a new wage spiral are spreading. The growing worry is that this year's cost -of - living leap may trigger an explosion in union wage settlements - a development that a Commerce Department official says would end Phase IV "with a bang."

—Surging international demand for raw materials, caused by an unusual simultaneous boom in the economies of the U.S., Europe and Japan, will keep upward pressure under prices of commodities ranging from copper and zinc to rubber and cotton. Any domestic price - control program is practically powerless before such international "commodity inflation," government economists believe.

—An uneasy feeling is spreading that this combination of forces, along with the breakdown of the old international monetary system and a world - wide plunge in investor confidence, has propelled the U.S. economy into uncharted waters. "There are no textbooks on this because nobody's ever been here before," frets a Federal Reserve Board official.

Continued price increases and some shortages in both food and raw materials are practically inevitable for months to come, if not longer.

"There are going to be some hangover shortages stemming from the price freeze" and affecting such things as port, chickens and eggs, says a Commerce Department economist. A Cost of Living Coucil analysis of the second - half outlook predicts that production of cattle, hogs, boilers, eggs and milk will continue to run below the year - earlier levels, assuring tight supplies and higher prices.

Administration officials who earlier had looked to this fall's harvests for relief aren't so hopeful now. "The world wide food shortage is just much worse than anybody comtemplated," says an Administration economist.

The pressures for nonfood commodities to feed surging industries of the major non - communist nations are similarly strong and unresponsive to a domestic controls program. "There's not a lot the program can do to affect the price of zinc on the London metals exchange or what the Japanese are willing to pay for soybeans," notes a Cost of Living Council official.

A top treasury official says the major new worry is that this uncontrollable "commodity inflation" soon will siill over into the wage area and trigger a new wage - price spiral. Though Administration men are gratified at the "reasonable" level of union wage contracts settled so far this year, they're increasingly skeptical that worker's demands will remain moderate in the face of continuing food - price surges.

Japanese have engine of future

By JAMES G. DRISCOLL
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

NEW YORK — Good old Japanese know-how did it. Inventive engineers at the Honda Motor Co. turned an old idea into a clean, workable engine that will be mass produced and will meet stringent 1975 auto-emission standards in California. Some knowledgeable engineers think it could be the engine of the future.

It's a version of the "stratified-charge" engine, which some American manufacturers have struggled with unsuccessfully for years. One of them is the Ford Motor Co. Concedes Lee Iacocca, Ford's president: "they have a new invention . . . that we didn't think of."

The startling fact that Honda's engine meets the 1975 emission standards without add-on devices — such as catalytic converters — sent car manufacturers from all over the world scurrying to Japan. They're swarming around Honda's research-and-development laboratory in Tokyo to see what Honda has wrought.

Honda is willing to share its technology — for a price. It reached limited confidential-disclosure agreements, with many car manufacturers, including America's big four: General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, and American Motors. These agreements provide some information, but not enough to build the engine.

But a licensing agreement does, and Ford and Toyota have now reached that kind of full-disclosure agreement with Honda. General Motors balked at paying Honda's disclosure price, which is based in part on the size of the company; GM, being the biggest, would have to pay the most. Yet GM president Edward N. Cole was interested enough to meet in Tokyo with Soichiro Honda, who heads the Honda company. Said Cole in testimony before the Senate subcommittee on air and water pollution:

"I went through this whole system with Mr. Honda. I had the pieces in my hand. I drove two of their cars which had this equipment, plus the Chevrolet Vega they had converted. These were good cars . . . they have done a good job."

The engine block is conventional. Cylinder heads, however, are modified by adding an auxiliary combustion chamber and another intake valve. Each cylinder, therefore, has two combustion chambers and two intake valves. And the engine has two carburetors instead of one.

Honda has promised to build 500,000 cars powered by these engines for the 1975 model year.

Teacher's notebook

Americans poorly taught about Constitution

By JUDITH GELBER

In reference to the Watergate scandal, a newspaper editor in Lebanon, Kansas, said: "People don't know that much about the system of government, about the Constitution . . . I don't know where the failure is, in the schools or what, but there seems to be a real well of ignorance of what the government is all about."

Long before the facts about Watergate became known, I was also inclined to believe that the public schools fail to do an adequate job of teaching our children "what the government is all about."

It seems to me that it is not enough to "cover" the Constitution almost solely within the context of the American Revolution. How can students comprehend the meaning of the Bill of Rights, for example, when, for the most part, they are primarily required to memorize them under such general headings as free speech, the right to bear arms, search and seizure, etc.?

It is not surprising, therefore, that the American people may not have understood the ominous foreboding in Sen. Sam Ervin's assertion that President Nixon violated the Fourth Amendment when he approved the 1970 plan to burglarize and plant electronic bugs without court warrants.

And it seems to follow naturally that a president who would not hesitate to violate the Constitution he swore "to protect and defend" when he took the oath of office would now claim that he alone — among 210 million Americans — is not subject to the laws that govern the rest of us.

President Nixon's legal argument for not turning over White House tapes of critically important conversations, in addition to the dubious claim of "executive privilege," is that the President "is liable to prosecution and punishment in the ordinary course of law for crimes he has committed, but only after he has been impeached, convicted and removed from office."

In other words, Richard Nixon asserts that, as long as he is president, the court system that can put the rest of us in jail for ignoring court orders can't touch him because he is above the law. This is a highly novel interpretation of the Constitution, to say the least, and appears to fly in the face of everything we've believed about our political system.

But many millions of Americans still see Watergate as a political "dirty trick" and not as a threat to our constitutional liberty. And part of the blame must go to the schools for teaching the Constitution as if it were a grocery list, without explaining how the different ingredients go together to create a gourmet meal.

American government should be taught as a separate course. This would permit students to learn the philosophy, function and structure of government apart from history, but also as an outgrowth of the conjunction of particular historical circumstances.

Thus we may prevent the American people from discovering one day that some men have turned the Constitution into as powerless a document as is the constitution of the Soviet Union!

Even seafood bargains vanish

Dow Jones-Ottaway News

NEW YORK — Only a few bargains remain at New York's Fulton Fish Market, the largest U.S. wholesale handler of seafood, and these are expected to disappear shortly.

John Vonglahn, director of the Fishery Council, says silver mullet from Florida wholesale for 25-30 cents a pound and croakers from Florida and Virginia at 30-45 cents, depending on size. Whiting from local waters wholesale at 15-35 cents a pound, also depending on size, he adds.

Normally, handlers say, these fish sell in the 10-15-cent range, and many are used as bait in sport fishing.

Harry Cirillo, manager of Booth Fisheries in New York, says prices for flounder, shrimp and lobsters, are "zooming out of sight." Agreeing with Vonglahn, he says that the latest surge in fish prices results from the meat shortage, though a strike of fishermen at New Bedford, Massachusetts, and severe competition from Japanese buyers also are factors.

Gray sole and yellow tail fillets wholesale from $1.80 to more than $2.50 a pound, dealers say. These prices are 50 cents to one dollar more than was charged July 19, when the Nixon administration removed ceiling prices on all food products except beef. Vonglahn says, "a good wholesale price for flat-fish millets at this time of the year is $1.25 a pound."

The New Bedford fisherman stopped going to sea July 19 in a dispute with boat owners. The men operating the boats, including captain and crew, get 60 per cent of the returns from the catches and the owners get 40 per cent. The men are demanding that boat owners pay a greater share of the increased operating costs, especially fuel, Vonglahn says.

Large shrimp, peeled and deveined, from Texas, Mexico and Panama, now wholesale for more than $3.25 a pound. In mid-July, prices ranged from $2.75 to $2.90 a pound. Lobster meat in 12-ounce cans is selling at $4 an up, 50 cents more than several weeks ago.

Fish buyers for the New York market say that wherever they go, they find agents for Japanese interests standing by and ready to outbid them for seafood, especially shrimp, sole, tuna, and even swordfish.
